MARBLEHEAD, Mass.—With a clean sweep already to the credit of the Americans, the three little sonder yachts which are representing the United States in the international races for the President Wilson and Governor Foss trophies met the three little German yachts this morning in the second race of the series.

The start was almost a repetition of that of yesterday. The wind was very light and with a long sleepy roll, surging into the bay, backed by a flood tide, the yachts had some difficulty in getting across the line.

The Americans beat out the Germans once more in the struggle for position.

The course was a three-mile beat a little south of east and the little fleet of racers was sent away at 11:10 with the Sprig in the lead. The first leg was a long slow one, but the breeze seemed to have more promise in it than at the start yesterday. The spectator fleet was cut down to a score or more of power boats and steam yachts, with a couple of big schooners behind.

Half an hour after the start the yachts had covered about one third of the distance to the outer mark and were moving very slowly, with the Sprig still in the best position, although the other yachts, including the Angela IV., were not far astern.

GIFT FLAG WAVES PATRIOTIC ADIEU FROM FRANCONIA

Stars and Stripes Presented to Winchester Couple Conveys Farewell From Steamer

As the Cunard liner Franconia left her berth at the East Boston docks early today Mrs. Alfred Barr of Winchester stood at the rail waving a large silk American flag that had been presented to her and her husband before their departure for a visit to the British isles.

The Franconia had on board 51 saloon, 80 second class and 300 steerage passengers on her sailing list, among whom were many Boston and New England residents. Included among the passengers were Mary Boyle O'Reilly, Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, the Rev. William E. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. S. Parker Brenner, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Barr, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Burnham, the Rev. George A. Hall and Mrs. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Whitney and Charles Steward, Boston agent for the Cunard line, accompanied by Mrs. Steward and daughter.

Three steerage passengers missed the boat, arriving at the dock just after the gangplank had been lifted.

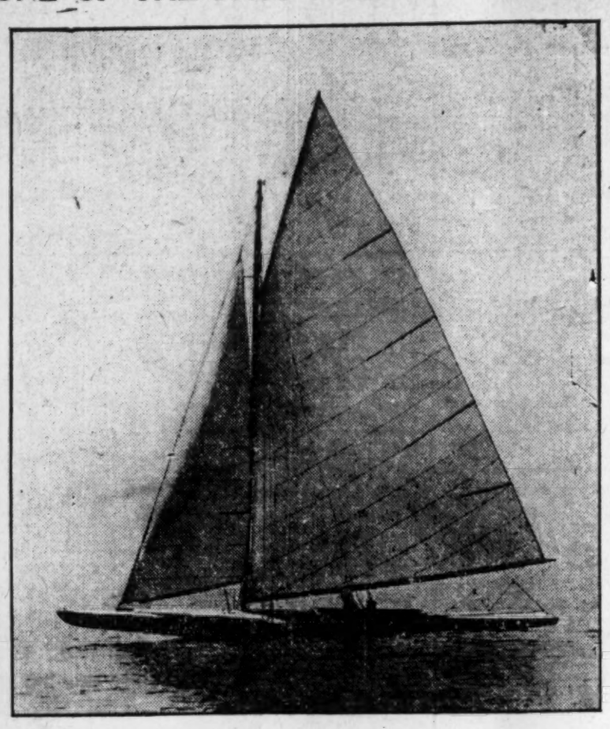

LIGHTS OUT IN STORES FROM CROSSED WIRES

Considerable damage was done and many stores in the downtown section of the city were without light and consequently closed this morning when the wires of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company short-circuited in the manhole in front of 40 Summer street.

The Gilchrist store did not open for business until a few minutes before 11 o'clock. Among the large stores affected were those of C. F. Hovey & Co., Summer street; Magrane, Houston Company, Washington street; R. H. Stearns & Co., Tremont street and Temple place; Smith Patterson Company, Kennedy's Clothing Store, Browning King & Co., Washington street; Talbot Clothing Company, Charles E. Lauriat Company, Collins & Fairbanks and Liggett's store, at the corner of Washington and Avon streets.

A number of wires to a substation in the basement of 40 Summer street were cut off and fire started, burning the timbers which make the temporary road bed between Washington and Hawley streets. Explosions were caused in several places. There was much flame and smoke and half an hour passed before the firemen got the flames under control.

POLICE ACTION ROUSES DUBLIN; INQUIRY SEEN

Government Investigation of Methods Employed by Officials in Dealing With Crowds Now Believed to Be Possible

COMPLAINT IS MADE

Special Cable to the Monitor from its European Bureau

LONDON—For three days Dublin has been given up to rioting. The attempt to hold a meeting in Sackville street proclaimed by the government ended in a collision with the police, with the result that since Saturday night spasmodic rioting has been going on which has ended in injury to upwards of 400 people. James Larkin, trades union leader, who was arrested on the charge of inciting men to violence during the trouble caused by the tramway strike, had been admitted to bail on undertaking not to take part in any meeting. He eluded the vigilance of the police and having disguised himself entered a Dublin hotel on the day of the proclaimed meeting and made an attempt to address the crowd from the balcony.

The hotel was at once rushed by the police, but his speech was the signal for renewed rioting, which continued all through Sunday afternoon and evening. Coming, as the disturbance has, immediately on top of rioting at Derry, it has caused attention to be drawn to the handling of the police. The Dublin police are under control of the municipality and are, like the police of the city of London, a separate body from the ordinary constabulary.

As in the case of Derry, large bodies of constabulary from other districts had been drafted into Dublin and some complaints are being made of the action of the police in Dublin as in Derry.

It is extraordinary how political feeling can change the point of view. Men who were supporters of the action of the police in Derry, where the brunt of the attack was borne largely by Orangemen, are seeing the matter differently now that the attack has been delivered on a crowd in Nationalist Dublin.

Mr. Handel Booth, liberal member for Pontefract, who was lunching in the room from the balcony of which Mr. Larkin delivered his address, has sent a vivid telegram to the London Daily Chronicle, in which he declares that the people in Sackville street were the ordinary Sunday crowd and that they were entirely surprised by the appearance of Mr. Larkin on the balcony, as they neither recognized him nor heard a word he said. In spite of this, he declares, the police issued from all by-streets and instituted a baton charge, the rioting caused by which has not yet been quelled.

Of course, it is impossible in the present excited state of feeling to arrive at the truth of what has occurred. The action of the police in Dublin, coming as it has immediately on top of similar action in Derry, will, however, probably force the government inquiry which had been practically refused in the former instance.

SEASON OPENS FOR SCALLOPS

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Cowesett bay was the scene of busy scallop dredging Monday, fishermen in motor boats taking advantage of the first day of the scallop open season.

Scallops are being served at hotels and restaurants at from 50 cents for a generous plateful to 20 cents for a lunch counter allowance.

MR. CARNEGIE CRITICIZED BY GERMAN PRESS

Steel Man's Words Concerning Kaiser at Cremer Bust Unveiling at Hague Peace Palace Resented by Newspapers

ADVISED TO ABSTAIN

Special Cable to the Monitor from its European Bureau

LONDON—Mr. Carnegie's speech in unveiling the bust of Sir Randall Cremer at the Hague has produced a torrent of criticism in the German press. The attempt to claim the Kaiser as belonging to the peace party is strenuously resented, and it is pointed out that the present increased strength of Germany's army and fleet is very largely owing to his initiative and incentive.

In the peace conference itself the press expresses mild academic interest, but this is changed into sarcastic references to the "steel king" when Mr. Carnegie's utterances are reviewed. Koelnische Zeitung expresses considerable doubt as to whether Mr. Carnegie will find that he can change the Kaiser, who certainly desires peace as long as peace is honorably possible, into a pacificist of the order of the American millionaire.

The most marked irritation is, however, shown over that passage of the speech in which the Kaiser's hands are described as not stained by blood. The papers generally unite in denouncing the remark and declaring that even if the German army had been engaged in war no stains would in that way be placed on the Kaiser's hands.

As for the Kaiser carrying the torch of peace, the statement is loudly scoffed at. The Kaiser, it is pointed out, possesses no such torch, and if he did, he has no power whatever to apply it. Finally, Mr. Carnegie is advised the next time he goes masquerading to keep the Kaiser's name out of his speeches.

STEAMER NAPOLI OF NEW SHIP LINE COMES TO PORT

With the arrival of the steamer Napoli, Captain Ferconi, from Naples today, the new line of Italian steamers between Naples, Palermo and Boston has been established. The ship brought 1844 passengers and stopped at Halifax where 55 additional second-class passengers were taken on board. She also brought a general cargo of 1500 tons.

STATIONMASTERS CAN LIMIT DUTY SAYS 'L' WITNESS

Mathias J. Nesdale, Agent of Carmen's Union, Declares Ambitious Men Are Prevented From Going Beyond Maximum

DESCRIBES METHODS

Methods whereby the stationmasters at the car barns of the Boston Elevated Railway Company are able to limit the maximum amount of work an employee may do in a day were disclosed by Mathias J. Nesdale, business agent of the Boston Street Carmen's Union, in his testimony at the continued hearing before the arbitration board in Ford hall today. He characterized the $12 a week guarantee as a most unfavorable condition for the men.

Mr. Nesdale said it keeps an ambitious man from putting in as much time as he would otherwise because no one is allowed to go over the proportionate daily work that he must do to earn his guarantee until every man has either done the proper amount of work to earn it or has come as near as possible to doing so.

An ambitious man, Mr. Nesdale said, cannot get a chance to work as much as he wants to. The station master has a record which tells him how each man has worked and he sees that every man gets a proportionate amount of platform work to give him his $12 guarantee. Not until all or nearly all of the men in the station have reached that stated amount of work, or as near as possible, will the station master allow any of the men to go over that limit.

When a man, according to the witness, has worked 11½ hours and would ordinarily be in turn to get one of the big night details he is sent off on some detail about 15 minutes or so and when he returns the large details have all been given out. The stationmaster has it entirely within his power to send a man out for half an hour switching or doing other work.

John P. Feeney, counsel for the union, asked what would happen if the men refused to go out on short trips and was told that they would be sent to the superintendent and disciplined. In reply to a question as to whether many complaints as to the working out of this plan had been received Mr. Nesdale said: "Heaps of them."

As to compensation received by instructors Mr. Nesdale testified that since his last testimony on this subject he had found that now men with or without a single "I" on the lapel of their coat are paid 10 cents a day extra for time consumed in teaching. Men with two "I's" are paid 10 cents a day anyway.

CHILD LABOR LAW OBJECTION STATED TO COMMITTEE

Henry Sterling of Boston, a labor leader, said today before the House special committee that the Legislature instead of passing the new child labor law which goes into effect today, limiting minors under 16 years of age to an eight-hour day, should have reduced the maximum to five hours per day at the same time making school attendance compulsory for all such children.

The special committee which is investigating the conditions surrounding the employment of women and children, because of comments on the new law, devoted today's hearing to a consideration of its effects.

Mr. Sterling said organized labor did not advocate the new law before the last Legislature, presenting instead what was known as the part-time schooling bill.

The part time law, he said, would mean that one shift of children would commence work at 7 in the morning, and working until 12 at noon, attending school in the afternoon. For the other shift the schedule would be reversed, and there would be no disarrangement of schedules, one minor simply taking up the work at 1 o'clock where another had left it at 12. He believed it would really be an advantage to the manufacturers.

The committee voted to make a trip to New Bedford on Tuesday, Sept. 16, for the purpose of securing first hand information, from both employers and employees, as to the workings of the new law.

MANUFACTURERS URGE COUNTRIES TO ENTER FAIR

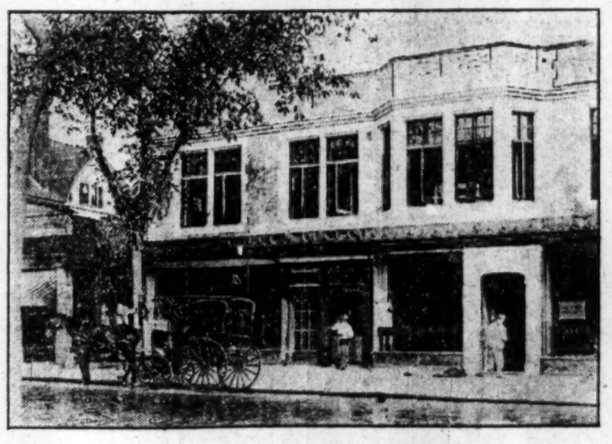

Arguments are being pressed by German and British manufacturers on the governments of England and Germany to reconsider the question of participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, according to Charles H. Green, chief of the department of manufactures of the exposition, who is in Boston for the day. Mr. Green arrived this morning and will leave for New York tonight. While here he is consulting about 40 of the Massachusetts manufacturers who are to exhibit at the exposition.

"Manufacturers here," said Mr. Green, "asked me what good this exposition will do Massachusetts, and I tell them that it will put them into touch with 800,000,000 people. For the active men of the Orient, representing 700,000,000 people and those of South America, representing 100,000,000 will be there. Japan is becoming Americanized by rapid fire methods and China is bound to follow."

MAYOR GOING TO OLD ORCHARD

BROOKLINE'S NEW POSTOFFICE IS NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS

Boulevard station at Coolidge Corner

Business at the new Boulevard office of the Boston postal district at Coolidge Corner began today when the station with its complete and modern equipment opened. Walter I. Gerrold is superintendent of the new office and has a staff of 40, including carriers, clerks, parcel post and special delivery men under him.

The structure is of brick, two stories in height, finished in quartered oak and fireproof throughout. To the left of the double entrance is the office of superintendent and then comes the carriers' windows. Facing on the spacious lobby and arranged for the despatch of business are the parcel post, special and general delivery and stamps, postal and savings, registry and money order departments.

The quarter of the working force inside are equally spacious and inviting, with the light, heating and ventilation facilities of the best. The overflow room, record vaults and carriers' retiring quarters are on the second floor. When Mr. Gerrold took hold and opened the office, 13 years ago, he had a force of but eight all told.

TURKISH ACTION BREAKS CONCERT OF POWERS AGAIN

Governments Not Unfriendly to Ottoman Plans Take Advantage of Recapture of Adrianople to Decline to Enforce Ejection of Enver Bey

CAVALRY IS OCCUPYING THRACE

Special Cable to the Monitor from its European Bureau

LONDON—An extraordinary sight is at present being witnessed of the Porte, after having been solemnly warned by the great powers and through the mouth of Sir Edward Grey, as chairman of the ambassadors' conference in London, that it must retire from Adrianople quietly, ignoring the warning and with the consent of these very powers entering into negotiations with Bulgaria. The simple fact is that the concert of Europe has once more completely broken down.

The powers which are not unfriendly to Turkey have taken advantage of the present condition of things and of the extraordinary rehabilitation of the Ottoman army to decline to put into action the arrangement arrived at for the ejection of Turkey. It will be remembered that these arrangements consisted of the financial boycott, of naval demonstration on the Asiatic coast and of the occupation of Armenia by Russia. All this pressure has been whittled down to a problematical partial financial boycott. The financial interests interwoven with the supply of armaments had no wish to do anything which would prevent financial advances to the Porte destined largely to be expended in arms in countries from which advances were made.

Those powers which are friendly to Turkey had no desire to incur the odium which would be roused in the Muhammadan world by sending their ships to blockade Asiatic ports whilst none of them wished to stop traffic in ships which did not belong to Turks and in produce which was being exported by their own subjects.

As a member of the Turkish cabinet pointed out to the Monitor representative several years ago, there is no ship which comes out of those ports which is a Turkish bottom and there is scarcely a warehouse in one of the ports which belongs to Turkey.

Finally, jealousy, which always manifests itself when one power is proposed to do the police work of the concert, culminated in absolute distrust of the government in St. Petersburg. It might be all very well to use the Cossack in Armenia to put pressure on the Porte, but again, as a distinguished European diplomatist pointed out to the Monitor representative only a week or so ago, there is nothing in the history of Russian expansion to cause any power to believe that Russia, having once occupied Armenia, could be induced to withdraw. Had she failed to withdraw, war or partition of Asia would have become inevitable, possibly both. This above all the powers were determined to prevent.

Consequently, Sir Edward Grey, in the name of the powers, calls peremptorily on the Porte to evacuate Adrianople and the Porte smilingly asks in the event of refusal who is going to put it out. In consequence of this, Europe is witnessing the impossible of a month ago. Sight, that is to say, of the government in Sofia entering into negotiations with Turkey for the surrender of its claim to Adrianople.

Meantime, in spite of all assurances given only a week ago to treat with the powers, the Turkish cavalry have passed Maritza and are slowly reoccupying Thrace. In reply, the great powers can think of no better answer than instructing their representatives to take a holiday.

TWO NEW HAVEN TRAINS COLLIDE IN A HEAVY FOG

NEW HAVEN—During a heavy fog the White Mountain express of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad ran into the rear of the Bar Harbor express near Wallingford, Conn., at 6:55 this morning. Sixteen persons were killed and many were hurt. Both trains were crowded with summer tourists returning to their homes.

The following statement regarding the wreck was given out at the South station: "The first section of the White Mountain express, due to arrive at 7:52 a. m. in New York, ran into the rear section of the Bar Harbor express, due to arrive at New York 7:36, one mile north of North Haven, Conn., at 6:55 o'clock this morning.

"Thirteen persons killed have been taken from the wreck. The section of the White Mountain express was in charge of Engineer A. B. Miller and Conductor Miller. The Bar Harbor express had stopped for signals. The weather was extremely foggy. The track at this point has automatic banjo signals."

This statement was amended officially later to make the number of killed fifteen, with a sixteenth name to be added at any moment.

WASHINGTON—The interstate commerce commission will send inspectors to report at once on the cause of the Wallingford wreck on the New Haven. It was said that Chief Inspector of Safety Appliances H. W. Belnap, would take charge probably, assisted by inspectors from Hartford and New Haven. The commission assumed the inspectors from New Haven and Hartford are en route already to the scene.

OPERA BALLET REORGANIZED TO BEGIN PRACTISE

Under the direction of Mme. Maria Paporello, the ballet mistress, the ballet of the Boston Opera Company begins rehearsals for the coming season at the opera house annex tonight.

The group of dancers to assist in the opera performances will be changed from a year ago, some new members having joined the company and some of the former members having left.

The membership will be finally determined by October. All the performers are from Boston or from the suburbs.

HOSE HOUSE CASE IS POSTPONED

Hearing on the petition for an injunction filed by the board of fire engineers of Needham to restrain the selectmen from making repairs or alterations on the hose houses of the town, which was to have been held in the Suffolk county supreme court today, has been postponed until Sept. 9.

The Needham selectmen, Austin Potter, James McCracken and John F. Gilpil will be called to answer the petition.

SCHOOL CENSUS NOW BEING TAKEN

Under the direction of John W. Slavin seven men were sent out this morning to begin taking the school census in Boston. Others will be sent out tomorrow and the next day to bring this number up to 12. They will take the names and ages of all children, from 5 to 15 years; the names of parents or guardians and the school whether they attend or not.

GOVERNMENT RENEWS SUIT AGAINST COAL COMPANIES

Civil Action Is Brought Against the So-Called "Anthracite Trust"—Reading System, Railroad and Company, Named With Several Individuals

PHILADELPHIA—Another attempt to break the so-called anthracite coal trust was begun in the federal court here this afternoon when the government filed a civil dissolution suit under the Sherman law. The "Reading system"—the railroad, coal producing and subsidiary rail and coal corporations, was attacked.

That the system owns 75 per cent and transports 50 per cent of all the anthracite coal in Pennsylvania was alleged by the government. The bill declares unless the present combination is smashed, the Reading will in time "control every ton of commercially valuable anthracite known to exist."

The defendants named are the Reading Coal Company, Reading Railway Company, George F. Baer, George F. Baker, Edward T. Stotesbury, Henry C. Frick, Peter A. B. Widener, Henry A. Dupont, Daniel Willard, Henry P. McKean and Samuel Dickson.

The petitioner asks that the defendants be compelled to so modify their operating agreements and contracts as to do away with the conditions of monopoly alleged to exist.

The petitioner declares, "that the defendant Reading Company constitutes in and of itself a combination in restraint of trade."

German Emperor's Part in Bucharest Conference Told

PEACE MOTIVE IN BALKANS TREATY REVISION POWER

History of Incident in Bucharest Negotiations Is Given by Special Envoy of Temps to the Rumanian Capital

KAISER'S PART TOLD

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France—The part played by the Emperor William in the negotiations which ended in the signing of the treaty of Bucharest did not, as has been supposed, consist merely in the despatch to King Charles of Roumania of the telegrams which marked the close of the Bucharest conference.

M. Puaux, the special envoy of the Temps to the Roumanian capital, declares that throughout the Balkan crisis the Emperor William has carried out a continuous correspondence with King Constantine. M. Puaux further states that it is a fact which cannot be denied that at the beginning of the ambassador's conference in London, Prince Lichnowsky, the German ambassador, did not manifest a strong interest in the Greek cause, but that his attitude changed utterly on his return from a visit to Berlin.

In a letter written to King Constantine the Emperor said, "I am fighting like a tiger for your rights." The firm stand taken by M. Majorescu, the Roumanian premier, throughout the Bucharest conference was due to support given him by the Emperor through M. Beldiman, the Roumanian plenipotentiary in Berlin, and councillor to King Charles.

The history of that incident in the Bucharest negotiations in which the right of revision of the treaty was insisted upon by some of the great powers is also given by the Temps envoy. The idea, he says, originated with M. Majorescu who, fearing that the conference would suffer shipwreck on the Kavalla reef, adopted the expedient of inducing the great powers to feign a desire for the possession of the power of revision of the treaty. To this the powers made no demur and the move was adopted as a strategem.

Vienna, however, saw in it an opportunity for pressure and instructed Prince Furstenberg to immediately carry out M. Majorescu's proposal as a means to her own ends. Sir George Barclay, believing in the platonic nature of Austria's action, also sent in a note to the Roumanian minister declaring that, whatever the decision of the Bucharest conference, the English government reserved to itself the subsequent right of demanding a revision on points affecting British interests.

The Austrian note was not so moderate; it spoke of revision to insure the safeguard of European interests. This was a great deal more than M. Majorescu had either desired or foreseen. Happily the German, French and Italian ministers remained passive, but the Russian minister, M. Schebeko, had personal reasons for wishing to be in favor at the Austrian court, and he sent a note to M. Majorescu couched in the same terms as that of Austria.

Sir George Barclay at this juncture received warning of the trap which had been laid for him and without any hesitation retracted his note. This left but Russia and Austria in favor of a power of revision which M. Majorescu had only proposed as a means of hastening peace, and not as a means of bringing about war. And thus the incident closed.

KAISER DECLARES HIMSELF FRIEND OF BUSINESS MEN

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN—The Kaiser has been paying a round of visits to various towns, since he left Swinemuende prior to joining the Kaiserin at Homburg. Rostock, Luebeck, Kreuznach and Mayence have all been visited and at several places his majesty has made interesting speeches.

At Rostock where the chief object of his visit was the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the Fusilier regiment, of which he is honorary colonel, the Kaiser was welcomed by the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg and the heads of the municipality. After a short time at the barracks his majesty inspected the famous Marien Kirche and finally the ancient university, where he addressed the students.

He touched upon the spirit of loyalty to God and the fatherland that filled the German nation a hundred years ago, and trusted that this spirit would still dominate at the present time. From Rostock the Kaiser went to the old commercial city of Luebeck, where he visited the Guildhall and, in response to the burgomaster's welcome, spoke some unusually appreciative words not only concerning Luebeck's trade, but commerce in general.

"I protect the merchant," were the Kaiser's words, "his enemy is my enemy and by God's help German trade will continue to develop in time of peace as it has done in the past." The Emperor has often enough spoken of his protection extended to the army and navy, but it is the first time he has openly expressed himself a friend of the business men, and his words have given a great deal of satisfaction in commercial circles.

U. S. SOCIETY HAS MEMORIAL IN HOLLAND CHURCH

(Special to the Monitor)

THE HAGUE Holland—Many English Protestants who in the sixteenth century were forced to leave their country, found hospitality and freedom in Holland. A number settled at Middleburg, in the province of Zealand, where they built a church.

In recognition of the brave stand they made for their religion and of the kindness shown to them by Holland, the Congregational Sunday schools of America have placed a memorial in the church at Middleburg, which is to be unveiled in September in the presence of an American deputation. The memorial bears the following inscription:

1582 1913

One in Christ.

To the Glory of the triune God.

In honour of William of Nassau and the hospitable city of Middleburg and to the founders of the modern Congregational order.

THE HAGUE PALACE OF PEACE FIRST PROJECTED IN YEAR 1899

Andrew White and Mr. Von Martens Said to Be Originators of Idea of Establishing Institution for Court of Arbitration and Other International Bodies

(Special to the Monitor)

THE HAGUE, Holland—The ceremony that took place at The Hague on Aug. 28, has been generally spoken of as the opening of the Palace of Peace, but this expression is not correct as may be seen from the following review of the facts.

The main result of the first peace conference in The Hague in 1898, was the foundation of the permanent court of arbitration, assisted by an international bureau. In 1899, Mr. von Martens, one of the Russian delegates of the conference, and his American colleague, Andrew White, saw the desirability of establishing at The Hague a palace of justice for the sittings of the court of arbitration, and all other international courts, and as a meeting place for future peace conferences.

Mr. White at once thought of Mr. Carnegie as the most suitable man to support this plan, and therefore applied to him. After much correspondence and many meetings, the Carnegie Foundation was instituted by "act dd, Skibo, Scotland, the 7th of October, 1903," under Netherland laws, for the purpose of building, furnishing and keeping up an edifice at The Hague to be a palace of justice for the permanent court of arbitration and to contain a library. As Mr. Carnegie expressed it, "It should become a center and a symbol of the desire for a world of peace, and well-being."

The board of administration of this foundation consists of five members, all Hollanders, four of them being appointed by the Queen of the Netherlands, and one by the board of administration of the permanent court of arbitration. The board of administration of the Carnegie Foundation is superintended by a board of nine members, also Hollanders, occupying the highest offices of state, namely the ministers of foreign affairs, justice, finance, and irrigation, the two chairmen of the chambers of Parliament, the vice-president of the privy council, the president, and the attorney-general of the supreme court.

The building having been completed and furnished, the ceremony which took place on Aug. 28, was the transferring of the Palace of Peace by the board of administration of the Carnegie Foundation, to the board of administration of the permanent court of arbitration. The first stone of the building was laid on the 30th of July, 1907. The building itself has been fitted up as a meeting place for the peace conferences; and the managers of the permanent court of arbitration, it is expected, will give their sanction to extending the scope and usefulness of the palace.

The permanent court of arbitration consists of about 140 judges, appointed by the different states that joined this institution, one state sending as many as four. From this number, in cases of arbitration, the states concerned are allowed to select their judges. These judges form a kind of jury ad hoc, i. e., constituted for a given case only.

On last Friday afternoon memorials to King Edward and Sir Randall Cremer were unveiled at the palace when Mr. Carnegie delivered the address for the latter. His speech in full follows:

"My first duty today is to unveil the bust of one of the pioneers of the greatest of all causes, the abolition of war, the killing of man by man, the greatest of all crimes.

"As many of you have done, I have read Mr. Evans' admirable history of Sir Randall Cremer, his life and work, which I commend to you, my hearers, for, as the author truly says, 'His life story is an amazing chronicle of persistent effort, of indomitable courage and, in the end, a splendid success.' I can never forget my conferences with him and his colleagues in Britain regarding the first visit to our country to present to our President the appeal of members of Parliament favoring the arbitration of disputes between the two branches of our English-speaking race; nor can I forget their introduction to and cordial reception by President Cleveland, who was deeply interested in the cause from the first, and became so in the members of the committee, especially in Chairman Cremer, with whose memorable career he had become acquainted.

"Ladies and gentlemen, the hero we are about to honor by unveiling his statue in this, the World's Temple of Peace, as among the foremost of peacemakers, was destined, as we have seen, to strange contrasts from beginning to end. Nor are these contrasts apparently destined to end; his statue stands here next to that of his late majesty, King of Great Britain, a fellow-worker for international peace. Both, monarch and subject, by their labors endeavored, and we believe succeeded in leaving the world better than they found it, and advanced the greatest of all causes, the brotherhood of man, through international peace.

"I now proceed to unveil the statue of one of whom it can be truly said—he left the civilized world his debtor.

"Gazing upon this image of our friend, I am sure we all feel that he is still with us in spirit, and is, in the words of an old English poet—'on fame's eternal bead-roll worthy to be filed.'

"Permit me to say a few words upon the present situation as affecting world peace as I see it, to which Cremer consecrated himself. At last the civilized world, after ages of sore trial, realizes that our greatest of all blessings is world peace. No ruler of civilized men, from emperor to secretary of state, but recognizes this; it is forced upon them, so far has mankind already advanced. Slowly has the truth been borne in upon men that nations were not intended to live or to labor separately, each for itself, but by interchange of their respective products. Their annual exchanges already amount to the enormous sum of £6,700,000,000 or $33,500,000,000 yearly, and are rapidly increasing, as by the law of nature they are bound to do. Nations do not live only upon what they themselves produce. Britain is already compelled to import her food supply—stop that and she starves—hence her gigantic naval forces. Other nations as they increase in population will be compelled to do likewise. Many already import a large portion of their food supplies. Last year Germany imported food products to the total value of £75,000,000, the total value of her imports being £477,000,000; France, £56,000,000; even America imported £71,000,000 worth of food products. Nations feed each other.

"A noble ideal here presents itself for the future of man—no nation laboring solely for itself, but all for each other, thus becoming a brotherhood under the reign of peace.

"Ladies and gentlemen, our duty is to prepare for this high destiny, and the path is obvious, since the increased exchange of food products is inevitable. I submit that the only measure required today for the maintenance of world-peace is an agreement between three or four of the leading civilized powers (and as many more as desire to join, the more the better) pledged to co-operate against disturbers of world-peace should such arise, which would scarcely be possible, however, in the face of the partnership agreement suggested.

"The Czar of Russia in 1898, seemingly divining that world-peace was near, invited the nations to meet in conference, saying, 'This conference would be by the help of God a happy presage for this century. It would converge in one powerful focus the effort of all the states which are sincerely seeking to make the great conception of universal peace triumph over the elements of trouble and discord.' The Czar's epoch-making message remains; history is to proclaim him the first ruler to call civilized nations to abolish barbarous war and enthrone angelic peace.

"Surveying the world today, the most striking figure seen is another emperor, the German Emperor, who has recently celebrated his twenty-fifth year of peaceful reign, his hands unstained with human blood—a unique record—hence Germany's astounding progress educationally, industrially and commercially, proving that the greatest of all national blessings is peace.

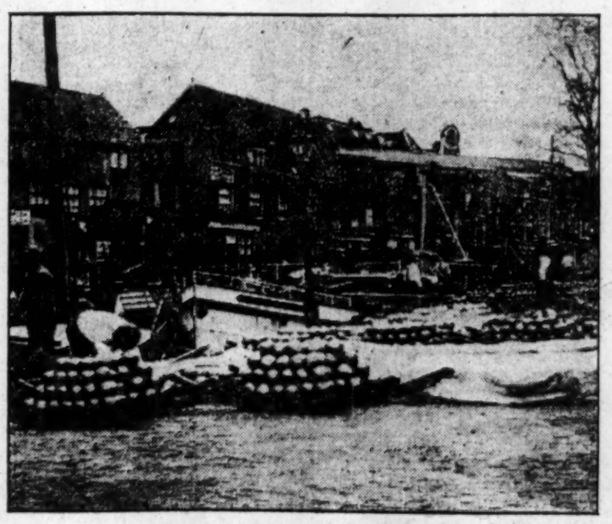

"At Lubeck recently the Emperor said: 'I protect the merchant, his enemy is my enemy. God grant that German trade may develop as hitherto, under my protection in time of peace.'

"Let us suppose that the Emperor were now to invite the chief civilized nations to confer upon the best means of ensuring world peace, which his own empire has enjoyed so long. That they would attend and listen is certain. Success I believe certain to follow. All seems so easy, too easy perhaps, but pray remember that the great inventions, discoveries and steps forward have been achieved at last by seemingly slight and trifling advances, because the ground had been well prepared, conditions constantly changing and advancing during long years of obscure experiment. Most great advances have appeared to burst upon us suddenly in their perfection, so it will probably be with the change from barbarous war to civilized peace—one small spark oft creates the flame. The German Emperor holds in his hand the torch and should apply the needed spark.

"We expected to have present today the Hon. Andrew D. White, chairman of the American commission to the first international Hague conference. He, like Cremer by his visit to Washington, played a great and original part by his visit to Berlin, rendering him also famous. He left the conference for Berlin when the German delegation at a critical moment threatened to withdraw, and induced the Emperor to order otherwise. Perhaps if invited he might today repeat the pilgrimage, and secure the Emperor's approval of the proposal that he invite the civilized powers of the world to unite in forming such a peace organization as described. This, once accomplished, the knell of war has sounded.

"The twenty-five years of internal peace now to the Emperor's credit would be merged in his grander triumph of world-peace over war. Men killing each other like wild beasts in civilized lands would no longer disgrace humanity, civilization would have supplanted barbarism, and the prophecy would at last be fulfilled that 'Men shall turn their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and learn war no more.' God speed that day, which is as certain to come, and come soon, as that day shall follow night. Man was created to ascend, and by a law of his being must march upward and onward toward perfection. Be of good cheer, soldiers of peace, all goes well. In this the holiest of all crusades there can be no such word as fail."

CHEESE INDUSTRY OF HOLLAND PROTECTED BY GOVERNMENT

Cheese market at Alkmaar

(Special to the Monitor)

AMSTERDAM, Holland—The Official Journal of Holland has published the measures taken by the government for the protection of the manufacture of Dutch cheeses. It has been made obligatory for all cheeses made from pure milk to bear a special stamp of the Dutch arms with the inscription "State Protection of Dutch Cheeses."

Government control stations will not inscribe on their books any persons or societies who do not guarantee the unadulteration of their cheeses. They must also have no interest in the manufacture of margarine or of any other fat which could be made use of in the manufacture of cheeses.

Further, such persons must not have on their premises any substance such as fat or oil in greater quantities than is necessary for domestic use. They must also permit the thorough inspection of their premises at any time by state officials.

PLANS FOR LONDON BOARD OF TRADE BUILDING INVITED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Architects are invited by the office of works to submit designs in competition for the new offices of the Board of Trade. The new building will be erected on a site in Whitehall gardens, where the whole of the houses have been acquired up to the grounds of Montagu house. It will have a frontage of about 350 feet to the embankment and one to Montagu house, the residence of the Duke of Buccleugh, of 208 feet.

The new offices, however, will not have any frontage to Whitehall as it is not intended to interfere with the royal united services institution and other buildings. A roadway to the embankment will be made between the new building and Montagu house.

The building will probably be of Portland stone and will have four or five stories, but these points have not been definitely settled. When completed, however, it will house the great majority of the 18 or 20 departments of the Board of Trade now scattered about London.

NEW QUEENSLAND FRUIT EXHIBITED

(Special to the Monitor)

BRISBANE, Queensland, Aus.—The department of agriculture and stock has received from the state nursery at Kamarunga the first fruit of the mangosteen tree planted there some years ago, and which, as far as is known, is the first fruit of this kind that has been grown in Queensland. It is a native of Molucca and the Spice islands.

The fruit is about the size of an apple and of a reddish brown color. It contains a juicy white pulp of a refreshing, delicate, sweet, yet acid flavor. It is considered to be one of the finest tropical fruits.

BARCELONA STRIKE CLOSES 238 MILLS

(Special to the Monitor)

MADRID, Spain—Contrary to official expectations the strike at Barcelona shows no signs of coming to a close. There is in fact no change in the aspect of the conflict, since 238 mills in the city are closed, and the strikers now number 22,000. The railways, roads, banks and public buildings are guarded by troops. Two hundred women strikers having attempted to hold a meeting in the center of the city were dispersed and several of them arrested.

AIRSHIP BEACON IN GERMANY PLANNED

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN, Germany—The Lokalanzeiger reports that Count Zeppelin is causing a powerful electric lamp to be fixed on an observation tower to be erected near Biberah. The light, which will be visible over a radius of quite 25 to 30 kilometers, is designed to act as a beacon for airships and aeroplanes. This will be the first aviator's beacon in the empire, and it is hoped that the idea will be very generally adopted.

SPECIAL REGISTRY FOR COOPERATIVE SOCIETIES IN INDIA

(Special to the Monitor)

MADRAS, India—For some years the cooperative societies in British India have developed so rapidly that the government has found it necessary to establish a special registry office in every province for cooperative societies.

Official recognition of the movement has also been given by the presence of government representatives at the conferences which have recently taken place for the furthering of cooperation.

The rate of progress of this movement may be judged from the statistics of the province of Madras, where the first cooperative society was established in 1905:

Year	No of Co-oper Societies	Members ber-ship	Year	No of Co-oper Societies	Members ber-ship
1905-6	25	2,733	1909-10	377	30,685
1906-7	63	6,439	1910-11	595	44,192
1907-8	101	9,537	1911-12	969	66,136

DUKE OF PORTLAND TO SELL ESTATE

(Special to the Monitor)

NEWARK, England—The Duke of Portland intends selling his estate at Sibthorpe, Cotham and Kilvington, between Newark and Nottingham, comprising about 3000 acres. In the near future the Duke of Newcastle is also selling land in the Newark district to the extent of about 4000 acres.

Magnolia and Newport Eagerly Buying Lamson & Hubbard's Furs

For several months it has been reported that during the coming season interest in dress would be concentrated on furs.

Never have furs been so beautiful, so interesting, both the foreign models and Lamson & Hubbard's modifications of the imported ideas. Contrary to the custom of past seasons, no particular kinds of fur will be especially favored; every kind will be worn, and variety—"something different" will be sought, rather than uniformity.

In cut, too, everything is different. There is more distinction of line—more opportunity for the free play of individual taste. There are countless pretty new ideas, so that every woman finds something to correspond to her manner of dressing.

Anticipating a keen interest in furs and a demand for the choicer kinds, Lamson & Hubbard have been gathering carefully selected skins from the world's leading markets and making them up into sumptuous evening wraps, street coats, muffs and neck pieces of infinite variety. The great collection of furs now assembled in the enlarged Bedford street store is not surpassed in quality in New York or elsewhere, and is easily the largest and most complete stock in New England. Boston has certainly never seen anything to match the fur styles which will be on exhibition as soon as the alterations of the store are completed.

Lamson & Hubbard are manufacturing furriers, who are doing business the year round. All skins are bought in the raw state, and the work of finishing and making is done right in the building standing at the corner of Bedford and Kingston streets, two minutes from Washington street.

As the furs come directly from trapper to retailer the cost of handling is reduced, and the furs can be sold at a lower price than when the profits of wholesaler and other dealers must be added to the price. The location, too, just out of the area of excessive store rents, helps to keep down the cost of production.

Progress of Japanese Colonial Expansion Described

JAPAN NEUTRAL TOWARD CHINA SAYS OFFICIAL

Incident at Shanghai Is Described as Due to Long Practise of Mikado in Naming Senior Admiral for Chinese Waters

DEVELOPMENT PLANS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—A prominent Japanese official at present in London, in the course of conversation with a representative of the Christian Science Monitor, gave his views on many points of importance in regard to the Chino-Japanese relations.

Speaking of the statement contained in telegrams from Tokyo to the effect that Admiral Yamamoto had issued a decree declaring that refugees from China would not be permitted to land in Japan, he said that in the absence of any official information the news ought to be accepted with caution, but, he insisted, the government in Tokyo would seem to be determined to act at every point with the utmost correctness, and, speaking as one having an intimate knowledge of the situation, he would say that it was undoubtedly the intention of the government of Japan to preserve a strict official neutrality in regard to the present situation in China.

Asked as to the incident at Shanghai, when the Japanese admiral as the senior officer of the international fleet, assumed the direction of operations, the Monitor's informant said that the construction placed upon this incident by a large section of the English press, and by recent speakers in the House of Commons, was not a correct one. It is not correct to say, the Monitor's informant continued, that Japan deliberately chose an officer to command the Japanese squadron at Shanghai, who would be certain to be senior in rank to all the other commanders present, as this is always the case with the Japanese fleet in Chinese waters. "You see," he continued, "Japan has always recognized that after Japan itself, the greatest concern to the empire must be her interest in China, and in Chinese waters, consequently after the home fleet the fleet on the China station has always been regarded as the most important.

Fleet in Two Divisions

"As a matter of fact, Japanese naval policy only makes two divisions of her fleet in time of peace. One, which is by far the stronger, is stationed in home waters, and the other in Chinese waters in the neighborhood of Shanghai. The admiral in command of the fleet on the China station is always of a very high rank, and as it is the custom of the powers to send admirals of junior rank to the China station, it must always be the case that the Japanese admiral takes seniority.

The Monitor's informant then went on to speak generally of Japan in connection with her colonial expansion, and on being questioned as to Formosa, in regard to rumors constantly circulating that Japan was not succeeding in her attempt to develop the resources of the island, chiefly on account of the climate, our informant replied that he was well aware that such statements had been made, but it might be taken that they were absolutely without foundation.

The development of the island since Japan took it over, some 15 years ago, has been phenomenal. Japanese traders and capitalists have been engaged in developing industry in all directions. Tea plantations and sugar plantations were springing up everywhere, and there was a very large industry in the manufacture of camphor. There was, he said, a steady influx of Japanese into Formosa, and the proof that they were successful was afforded by the number of people in Japan today who had made their fortunes on the island.

Of course, he said, as might be expected, many Japanese who emigrate to Formosa and make their fortunes there return ultimately to Japan, just as Englishmen so frequently return to the mother country after having made their fortunes in the colonies, but the island steadily increases in popularity, and the permanent settlement there of large numbers of Japanese is remarkable.

Korea Development

Passing from Formosa to that other Japanese acquisition, Korea, in reply to a question from the Monitor's representative, as to whether it was not true that the Korean farmer was himself little, if at all, inferior to the Japanese farmer, and whether it was not also true that the greater part of the land in Korea was already under cultivation when the Japanese took over the country, our informant said that that was certainly a fact, but the Japanese recognized from the first that the development of Korea lay in the introduction into agriculture of western methods, and that by such methods the productiveness of the land might be increased enormously.

They had, therefore, followed this policy, and there were in Korea several companies financed with Japanese capital, which had for their object the acquisition of large tracts of land, and the farming of them according to the most scientific methods of the west.

Asked as to whether the pursuance of such a policy did not involve a certain amount of hardship on the Korean peasantry, who were necessarily dispossessed of their small holdings, the Monitor's informant said that the labor of these farms was done by Koreans, and that their position as laborers was no worse, and in many cases a great deal better than it had been when they farmed their own land and were at the mercy of all the chances attendant on agriculture on a small scale.

Steady Importation

For several years past, he said, there had been a steady importation into Korea of agricultural implements of the latest models, and this importation was largely on the increase. In regard to the source of this supply, he said that up to the present it had come mostly from Canada and the United States, and although there was apparently as yet little attempt on the part of the Japanese manufacturers to supply this need, he recognized that such growing demand offered a very profitable field for enterprise in this direction.

Going further afield, our informant went on to speak of South Manchuria and the growing Japanese interest in that province. There was, he said, a steady flow of Japanese emigrants into South Manchuria, but up to the present they were chiefly employed on the South Manchuria railway. The railway itself was practically finished, but there were several extensions in course of construction, and Japanese labor was being largely employed on these extensions and in the maintenance of the line as a whole.

Questioned in regard to the financing of the railway, the Monitor informant said that, although it had been financed in the usual way, nevertheless the Japanese government had a very large direct interest in the line. As to its main source of revenue, he said it was chiefly valuable as a means of bringing agricultural produce and Chinese manufactures quickly to the coast and taking Japanese produce into the interior. It also, he said, afforded an alternative route to Europe by way of the Trans-Siberian railway.

DERVISH ATTACK ON CAMEL CORPS MISUNDERSTOOD

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The difficulty of dealing with horses in countries like Somaliland has led to the adoption of the camel corps. These camel corps are used by the British occupation force, partially as cavalry, and partially as police. In the present instance, the corps which was surrounded was fairly severely handled, the attacking party numbering between 2000 and 3000 dervishes.

The information which has found its way into the press, as well as the pictures which have been supplied, have mixed up this Somaliland corps with an Egyptian corps. In the case of Somaliland, the men of the corps are natives and not British soldiers, whilst the distance from Burao to the coast seems to have been about doubled.

The whole question of the occupation of Somaliland has always been a difficult one. The country is of no particular use to anybody and was really taken possession of for purely strategical reasons in connection with the Aden hinterland. The country itself is larger than England, and the protectorate exercised over it has always been of the loosest possible description.

NEW SOUTH WALES BUYS LOCOMOTIVES

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—T. A. Coghlan, the agent-general for New South Wales, states that his government has authorized the placing of a further order for 80 locomotive engines with British firms. The locomotives will be used on the state-controlled railways of New South Wales, and the chief commissioner of railways is anxious to obtain delivery of most of them early next fall, to enable him to handle the wheat harvest in February, 1914, and to cope with the rapid expansion now taking place in every industry.

The sum of £447,000 will be expended upon engines in England by the New South Wales government. At present the railway works and other firms in the state are fully occupied, the total expenditure each month on new rolling stock amounting to £105,000.

ANTI-HOME RULE PLANS ARRANGED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Mr. Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson have accepted invitations to speak at a Unionist demonstration at Newcastle-on-Tyne at the end of October. This engagement fits in with the renewal of Sir Edward Carson's tour of populous British centers in his campaign against the home rule bill. The present campaign will include meetings at Inverness, Dundee and Aberdeen in Scotland, and later in England at Manchester, Sheffield, Lincoln and Plymouth.

FINLAND BUDGET RULES RATIFIED

(Special to the Monitor)

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia—The new budget regulations for Finland have received the imperial assent. The Czar has also given his sanction to the decisions of the cabinet referring to the use of the Russian language in correspondence between Finnish and imperial authorities and other official personages.

LORD CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND TERRITORIAL SYSTEM FOUNDER

(Special correspondence of the Monitor)

LONDON—Shortly after the rising of Parliament the lord chancellor, Lord Haldane, will set sail for Montreal as the guest of the American Law Association. It is a very rare event for a lord chancellor to leave England during his term of office to act in an official capacity, and the sovereign's consent must be obtained before he can do so. When it is a question of a holiday visit it is a different matter, and it may be remembered that Lord Loreburn, Lord Haldane's predecessor, paid a visit to America in this way.

The last time a lord chancellor paid a visit to a foreign country in his official capacity seems to have been as far back as Cardinal Wolsey's time, when that statesman went on his famous embassy to France, taking the great seal with him—a serious breach of privilege which was made one of the grounds of his impeachment. Lord Brougham also got into disgrace for taking the great seal across the border into Scotland.

Lord Haldane will commit no such breach of constitutional practice but will conform to custom and leave the great seal at home in the custody of three lord commissioners, Viscount Morley, Earl Beauchamp and Sir Herbert Cozens-Hardy, who have been recently appointed commissioners for this purpose.

The Rt. Hon. Richard Burdon Haldane, created first Viscount Haldane in 1911, has held the office of lord chancellor since 1912. He is also a member of the judicial committee of the privy council, rector of Edinburgh University and chancellor of the University of Bristol. He was Gifford lecturer in St. Andrews University, 1902-4, and was secretary of state for war from 1905 till he was appointed to his present office in 1912.

All this gives, however, a very slight idea of Lord Haldane's capacity. In his days at the bar he was a brilliant advocate, and during his period as secretary of state for war, he founded the territorial system. Long before he made his mark as a politician he was known as a deep thinker, and a close student of German literature.

(Copyright by Reginald Haines)
LORD HALDANE

His translation of Schopenhauer is a classic, and his attainments in this way have made him persona grata at the court of Berlin and a personal friend of the Kaiser. It was he who laid the foundation of those better relationships between Berlin and London which are beginning to bear such remarkable fruit, and when the history of those transactions comes to be written it will be found that his influence did much towards removing a grave political danger to the peace of Europe.

CHINA LEGISLATORS' SALARIES QUESTION OPENS CONTROVERSY

(Special to the Monitor)

SHANGHAI, China—In a recent leading article on the subject of payment of members of the Chinese Parliament the China Republican points out that almost from the very beginning the Parliament has met with abuse, that, in fact, even before it met the air was thick with prognostications of the certain failure of the system before it was given anything like a fair chance of showing to the world what it could do.

It is therefore scarcely a matter for wonder, continues the article, that for some time past murmurs of discontent have made themselves manifest in certain quarters in regard to the salaries paid to members of Parliament, and that attempts are being made to question the utility of the system by comparison with its cost to the nation.

The writer then goes on to criticize an article in the Peking Daily News, saying it is really a fierce attack on the members of Kuomintang, which has a majority in Parliament, though ostensibly it is intended to point out the extravagance of the Chinese Parliament. The article in question denounces as reckless extravagance the proposal to increase members' salaries to an extent which would make the expenditure on this count more than double that in England, and says that, when a comparison is made of the cost of living, it is indisputable that China's Parliament is the costliest in the world.

The writer in the China Republican points out that the members of the two houses of the Chinese Parliament exceed in number those of the British House of Commons by some 100 heads, and that salaries paid are in respect of both houses and not, as in the case of England, the lower house alone. He also compares the salary paid to members of the Chinese Parliament with those in other republics and shows that it is equal to that given in France, and a third of that which is paid to an American representative. But, he says, it is not so much a question of dollars and cents as of safeguards provided by a system of adequate payment. Such a system at once removes the chief encouragement to corruption, which is what is necessary.

AUSTRALIA OPENS 306,000 ACRES AGRICULTURAL LAND TO LEASE

(Special to the Monitor)

ADELAIDE, S. Aus.—Good progress is being made in South Australia with the surveying of areas of agricultural lands which are served by the railways recently built or in course of construction. These lands, which are mainly situated on Eyre's peninsula and east of the River Murray, are thrown open for allotment by the land board from time to time as the work of surveying is completed.

Under the amendments to the crown lands act made last session at the instance of the commissioner of crown lands and immigration, Hon. Fred W. Young, M. P., these lands may be taken up on exceptionally favorable terms. An area of about 306,000 acres situated in various hundreds on Eyre's peninsula, and served by the Darke's peak and Darke's peak extension and Minippa hill railway lines, was last week gazetted open to application until Aug. 12.

The blocks can be applied for under either perpetual lease or agreement to purchase, and plans, giving detailed information as to situation, quality, price, rent, etc., have been issued by the survey department. The term of the agreements will be for 36 years. Each successful applicant has the right to apply to the commissioner of crown lands to have a rain-shed and tanks, 10,000 gallons' total capacity, erected on his holding in accordance with the designs shown on the plans of the lands. It is expected that the cost will be approximately £130.

FRANCE PLANNING NAVAL ARSENAL REORGANIZATION

PARIS, France—The government is proposing to spend a sum approximating to 65,300,000 francs between 1913 and 1920 on the naval arsenals.

The minister of marine is further taking steps to organize the expenditure of this money on lines which will insure a maximum of advantage to the navy, and will prevent all waste. For this purpose a committee of officers and engineers has been appointed under the presidency of Vice Admoral de Jonquieres to report on the best methods of reorganizing the arsenals.

At present they are independent of each other in both administration and expenditure, and it is M. Baudin's idea that the establishment of a central directing authority will not only introduce cooperation between the naval centers, but will also do much to reduce the expenditure.

DUNNE BIPLANE STABILITY TESTED

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France—The Dunne biplane continues to be the subject of experiments by the French military authorities. Capt. Felix, who flew on one of these machines from England to Versailles, has made a series of exhibition flights since his return in the presence of General Hirschauer, the permanent inspector of aeronautics, and other French officers. In spite of adverse weather conditions, the trials were very successful and the perfect stability of the aeroplane without control was shown.

TRAFFIC CHANGES URGED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Important changes, both administrative and legislative, with a view to strengthening the control of the traffic routes by centralized authorities, especially in London, are recommended by the motor traffic committee, whose report was recently presented to the House of Commons.

AUSTRIA FOREIGN AFFAIRS POLICIES ARE CRITICIZED

Neue Freie Presse says Kingdom Is Governed by Men Who Are Bureaucratic System Prisoners

VIENNA, Aus.—An indictment of a searching character is made against the policy of the Ballplatz in a recent issue of the Neue Freie Presse. "Our Kingdom is governed," says the journal, "by men who are the prisoners of a bureaucratic system which has no national basis, and which determines the destinies of empires absolutely independently of public opinion. Good or bad harvests, comfort or misery, plenty or famine, have no meaning to them.

"Never has there been such a wall between officialdom and the people, between the arbitrary use of force in the palaces of ministers and the discontent which surges all over the land. It may be asked by what authority the minister of foreign affairs adopts a policy which, to take an example, puts the dignity of the monarchy in the balance on the question of Ishtip; which alienates the Balkans for a strip of Macedonian territory; which prolongs the economic exhaustion of the country in the defense of some villages the very names of which were unknown to geographers but a few weeks ago.

"The mere theoretic authority for these acts does not concern us but we wish to know where that authority has been obtained which is derived from Parliaments and without which not even an absolute government can act. The Ballplatz policy has no support nor stability, it is a mere game of functionaries, with nothing either national or imperial in its nature.

"Our monarchy has suffered so enormously during these last 10 months, it has so lost confidence in itself, that if there were but a statesman of understanding, it would be his duty to endeavor to knit together again the government and the people, and to reconstruct as fast as is possible all that has been destroyed."

DENMARK BEGINS RAISING REINDEER

(Special to the Monitor)

COPENHAGEN, Denmark—The experiment of bringing reindeer to live and thrive in Denmark has succeeded. In northern Jutland, where the ground is covered with moss, the reindeer thrive well. This circumstance has encouraged a clergyman, living on Romo, one of the smaller isles on the west coast of Sonder-Jutland, to keep reindeer on the heath belonging to his parsonage.

It is fully expected that the deer will become a new source of revenue to the inhabitants of the island. About 2000 hectares of the land is covered with reindeer moss, and 500 deer are able to find pasturage there. It is calculated that the profit on each reindeer will approximate to 45 kroner annually.

JUBILEE AMNESTY TO BENEFIT 24,000

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN, Germany—According to semi-official information just published it seems that the amnesty granted by the Emperor on the occasion of his jubilee is much more comprehensive than was generally believed it would be. The number of cases in which a full or partial condonement of offenses has taken place, is about 24,000.

These cases comprise delinquents in the army and navy as well as civilians, and as far as can be understood political offenders have not been included. A strange feature of the amnesty is that it was pronounced by the Emperor the second week in June, but has only just come into effect.

SWEDES RENEW DEMAND FOR NAVY

(Special to the Monitor)

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—The agitation for the increase of Swedish naval armaments, which led the Swedish people to subscribe vast sums for the construction of a new battleship, has again been fanned by the recent naval manoeuvers.

The question of a new naval base on the west coast is occupying the attention of the authorities and public alike, and it is thought likely that one may be established in the vicinity of Gothenberg. Many of the papers contend that the neutrality of Sweden can only be protected, in the event of a war between two powers for the supremacy of the North sea, by the strength and mobility of her navy.

TELEMARKEN ROAD OPENS NEXT YEAR

(Special to the Monitor)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway—The work on the new railroad in Telemarken is now practically completed and matters are being pressed forward as quickly as possible so that the line may be open for traffic in the spring of 1914. The building of the line has been a work of considerable importance, for rocks had to be blown up, bridges built, and two tunnels mined through the mountains.

Broad Liberalism in Their Selection Is Urged by Minister of Education Who Issues New Decree to the Various Officials

SECULARISM DECRIED

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France—Secularism with regard to elementary education in France has been carried to such lengths that its very foundation has been shaken. The extremes to which the partizans of the non-clerical system and their opponents have gone have carried them beyond the pale of all reason.

Many attempts have been made to modify the fanaticism on both sides but so far without any practical results. A special effort has now been made to deal with this matter and a decree just issued has fixed the conditions under which each year there is to be drawn up in each department the list of books recognized as suitable for use in the public elementary schools.

The question as to what books shall be used is the one around which the greatest controversy has waged and which has been made the cause of much interruption to the progress of public elementary education in the country.

New Decree Issued

The minister of education has taken the occasion of the publication of the new decree to address individually the various elementary school authorities, reminding them of the agitation that has raged with regard to the books used in the schools and of the result of the governmental inquiry concerning the regulation in force since 1882. He also recalled to them that by the findings of this commission the terms under which these regulations were conceived had not been correctly interpreted nor administered in a uniform manner, nor had those responsible realized sufficiently either the nature or extent of their powers and duties.

It was this, the minister said, that had made necessary the revision of the text of the regulations. In speaking of the spirit in which the revision had been made he said that the state had not for a moment sought to reserve to itself the convenient but dangerous privilege of itself preparing the official lists of books to be placed in the hands of the departmental authorities.

The state declined to impose upon them any doctrine, moral system, historic dogma or scientific method. It was on the contrary of opinion that public education could be nurtured and inspired only by means of the most liberal freedom. It placed the fullest confidence in the local authorities leaving to them complete initiative.

On the other hand, the state could not ignore that taking into consideration the needs of national education and their duty toward the children, parents and teachers themselves, some danger might lie in an unlimited facility of choice and for this reason it devolved on the departmental commttees to revise the proposals of the cantonal assemblies.

Officials Responsible

The vital question, the minister said, was what was the role the authorities had to play? It did not suffice to just formally accept and sign the list presented. It was their duty to remember that they were responsible to the parents of the children for the educational and moral value of the books placed in the children's hands.

In conclusion the minister said that it was not sufficient to merely tacitly sanction, by a kind of professional neutrality, an inefficient material which was lacking both in substance and intention. What was needed was that they should become infused with the spirit of broad liberalism and traditional tolerance of the university. They must, moreover, not forget that the minds of children were still undeveloped and incapable of reaction against the written law.

The work which ought to be proscribed out of respect to their tender age, in addition to those which were opposed to moral teaching, to the constitution and laws of the country, were books on violent polemics which provoked or engendered hatred amongst citizens and tended to weaken and compromise the growth of patriotism. The public school which was open to all children without distinction of race, religion or party, should in the interest of them all be a sanctum of harmony and peace, upon the threshold of which disputing arguments should be left behind.

ALL MARAKESH GIVES WELCOME TO GEN. LYAUTEY

Resident General of Morocco Is Object of Holiday Reception at One of the Capital Cities

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France—The reception of General Lyautey by the population of Marakesh and the contrast which it constitutes to that accorded him in Fez in May, 1912, is noted by the Temps Moroccan correspondent. The contrast serves to illustrate the characteristics of these two capital cities of Morocco.

Fez is a city of traditions, a religious center, fanatically anti-Christian, and this antagonism to anything European was clearly marked in the entire lack of welcome shown on General Lyautey's entry into the city. Only a few stragglers were to be seen in the streets, and there was not a sign of native rejoicings.

Marakesh has an entirely different character. It is hospitable, genial and its inhabitants in child-like fashion make the arrival of strangers an occasion for a holiday. At the entry of General Lyautey and his suite into the town, the whole population turned out in Sunday attire to meet him, and the procession wended its way along the streets to the beating of native drums and the screams of the women and children.

General Lyautey was accompanied by General Brulard who with several of the kaids had met him in the outskirts of the town. With them was a troop of native horse. At the gates of the Marakesh the pasha gave official welcome to the resident general who proceeded to the Baya, once the gorgeous dwelling of a minister of the Sultan Abdel Aziz. At a reception held at the sultan's palace, General Lyautey invested Moulai Youssef with the insignia of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor.

New England Industries Are Defended

Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire Replies to His Democratic Colleague—He Declares Tariff Enables Business to Grow

NEW RATES OPPOSED

WASHINGTON—Addressing himself to the pending tariff bill in the Senate today, Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire defended the industries of New England, replied to statements made by his Democratic colleague, Senator Hollis, in a speech some weeks ago, asserted that labor conditions in New England were much better than pictured and declared that the Underwood-Simmons bill especially singles out New England manufacturers as victims of reductions in tariff rates.

Senator Gallinger declared that in this instance of tariff legislation as before, the South had always been against the North on the question of protection, and when opportunity offered had discriminated against the North, especially against New England.

"This bill strikes a hard blow to the industries of the New England states, which produce more than one half the boots and shoes of that nation and more than one half the cotton, worsted, woolen and felt goods output," he said. "New England also leads the nation in the fishing industry and in the production of watches and clocks, hardware, cutlery and tools; has the largest woolen mills, shoe, watch and confectionery factories in the world; has 42.1 per cent of the manufacturing establishments of the country, which employ 500 or more employees each, and has nearly four times the density of population that is an average for the rest of the United States.

"The average wage paid in all the industries of New England, men, women and children included, is $506, an infinitely higher wage than is paid in any European country and at least 40 per cent higher than is paid in the southern states."

The senator then said his colleague was mistaken in declaring that the Democratic policy was indorsed at the last election because those voting the Democratic ticket were in the minority by 1,000,000 votes. He said that if the tariff issue had been squarely before the people the protective principle would have been overwhelmingly indorsed.

The senator asked what would become of New England if it were not for such cities as Manchester, Nashua, Dover, Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford and Fall River with their textile industries, quoting Senator Hollis as proposing that "it is a subject for anxious thought whether a state is better off for possessing many cities of this character."

Statistics were given to show these textile cities to be better than the average of cities throughout the country. Figures were also given to show that textile workers had substantial bank accounts and annually sent large sums of money abroad to relatives.

At the conclusion of Senator Gallinger's speech Senator Hollis replied for 15 minutes, reiterating his former statements that the mill operators of New Hampshire forced their employees to live in hovels because of low wages. He denied that only a minority in his state accorded with his tariff views and said he was elected to the Senate by Democrats and eight Republicans who well knew his views.

The incident was closed when Senator Gallinger said: "I give notice that in the next political campaign I shall fight this out with my militant colleague before the people of our state, and we shall see whether he is right or I am."

NEWS OF THE NAVY

Mr. Daniels, the secretary of the navy, will soon select a successor to Capt. Robert L. Russell, who has been judge advocate general of the navy since Nov. 3, 1909. Captain Russell will be assigned to the command of the battleship South Carolina, succeeding Capt. Thomas Snowden, whose sea duty will expire soon.

Surgeon General Charles F. Stokes, chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery, has renewed his recommendation for the abolition of the monthly tent. He has proposed instead to have an annual examination conducted by naval surgeons, and if it appears from this examination that any officer of the navy or marine corps is not up to a prescribed standard to order him before a retiring board.

About a hundred enlisted men have filed requests with the bureau of navigation for permission to take the examination for assistant paymaster.

BOWLERS DINE AT CITY CLUB

Followers of bowling on the green who came from various parts of New England for the tournament Monday at Franklin Field, were entertained in the evening at the City Club by members of the Boston Bowling Green Club. After dinner the visitors enjoyed remarks on their favorite sport. A. C. C. Hill, president of the Boston club, presided.

The members of two teams from the Brooklyn Bowling Green Club, two teams from Fall River, two representing the Roselawn Club of Pawtucket, two from the Hartford Bowling Green Association and two teams from the Thistle Club of Hartford were present.

ARGENTINE TEAM WINS TROPHY ON CAMP PERRY MEET

CAMP PERRY, O.—The Argentine Republic team won the first trophy of the international tournament of the big shoot meet here Monday, the Argentine-American naval trophy, scoring a total of 1612 points, while the United States navy had a total of 1490. The match was held on the 300-meter range, the 600-yard and the 1000-yard ranges.

The wind bothered many of the foreign shooters, especially the Swiss, who are used to the cool mountain breezes.

The members of the French team have been trying their fortune at the targets on the various ranges and are pleased with the cards they turned in. The Swiss shooters have their special make of rifles which they use. These guns are made especially for the 300-meter work and others for the miniature targets.

At the running deer targets Monday Capt. J. G. Dillin of the sixth Pennsylvania had the high score, with 42 out of a possible 50; Lieut. C. H. Cobb of the navy was next with 41, while Alfred P. Lane of the New York Athletic Club is third high, with 40.

NAVY SECRETARY DISCUSSES LABOR IN CONNECTICUT

HARTFORD, Conn.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, in addressing a big audience at Charter Oak park Monday afternoon, discussed labor legislation, the progress of labor, the dedication of a day to labor and pointed out that the creation of a department of labor had made the day's celebration of greater importance than its predecessors.

He asked: "Is there not too much of the reckless, don't-care spirit in the American people? Do we not stride through life in a slap-bang, 'let-her-go-Gallagher' fashion?"

Secretary Daniels had extended to him the hospitality of Hartford. A reception and luncheon, both informal, were extended at the Hartford Club, and the secretary had an opportunity to meet many of the state officers, headed by the Lieutenant-Governor.

TOURISTS SURGE BACK TO DUTIES AFTER VACATION

Throngs of returning vacationists added to the crowds coming back from brief trips over the holiday, continue today to break the traffic record set Monday.

With the North station drawing from the mountains, shore, inland districts and summer resorts of Canada scurrying thousands of persons poured through the trainshed and back to business this morning, beginning with the first train to pull in. Practically all the through trains are running in two sections. The same is true of the South station where people from the Cape arrive.

The excursion steamers, particularly on the shorter runs, such as Nantasket and Nahant, established new records Monday.

PRINCE-PERKINS PLAY SPOT SCENE OF A FAIRY PLAY

A children's presentation of "Beauty and the Beast," dramatized by Miss Vera Mikol who also trained the young actors and made the costumes, was the principal event of the closing exercises of the Prince-Perkins school playground held Saturday afternoon near Fenway pond under the auspices of the Mothers Club. Miss Mikol is a pupil at the Girls Latin school and a graduate of the Prince school.

Folk dances, athletic contests, an address by Miss Katherine L. Campbell outlining the season's work, and the singing of patriotic songs were also included in the exercises. Refreshments were served and each of the 200 children received a package of sweets. The teachers in charge were Miss Mildred Brown of Marblehead and Miss A. Johnson of Beverly.

COSMOPOLITAN STUDENTS FORGE PEACEFUL BONDS

President Thwing Sees States as Well as Universities of the World Giving Support to Proposed International Bureau

SECTIONS MEETING

ITHACA, N. Y.—With plans for international organization to more closely bind students of the present day in all countries in ties of peace and friendship definitely outlined, the congress here of cosmopolitan students' clubs divided today into sectional meetings to consider the subject matter of the various papers presented. Much business intervenes before the sittings close Wednesday.

Charles F. Thwing, president of Western Reserve University, spoke Monday on "The establishment of an international bureau of students, with its best means for support and organization." He said that all international organizations already in existence should be used and averred that all the universities will approve and the educational ministers of foreign governments cooperate.

Papers were also read by delegates from Germany, Italy and Russia, the discussions bearing on the establishment of an international student magazine, propoganda for peace and social reform.

Closing the day, a reception at the home of Andrew D. White was marked by large attendance and cordiality. Conversations indicated that the visitors were much impressed by the sights of the George Junior Republic, visited Sunday, when an address was made by Henry George. The address of Philander P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education, on "International Interdependence," at Saturday's session, was another fertile topic of review.

That great responsibility in the progress of international affairs lies with men who are educated and those who are attaining their education, was the message in an address on "The Scholar and the United World," delivered by Edwin D. Mead.

The scholars of all nations should band themselves together in generous enthusiasm for the highest interests of common humanity and bring it about, as with definite determination they surely could, that the relations of men the world over in politics and society be ruled by reason, he said. The speaker referred to Fichte's addresses to the German people a century ago and pointed out their result in national which had been so largely the secret of Germany's uplift and advance after the devastation of the Napoleonic wars.

What the world needs today, he said, is a great league of international Fichtes who shall address themselves with equal devotion and equal power to the uplift of the nations and of mankind. He appealed to this international congress of students to make itself such a center of inspiration and enlightenment, an ever growing and expanding force to bring about a united world based upon justice and brotherhood.

He referred in closing to Emerson's great address upon the "American Scholar." "The best that we here in America can do for you," he said to the foreign students, "is to commend to you our own best thought and thinkers."

UNIONS OUT IN STRENGTH HOLD LABOR PARADE

Parties on Floats and in Carriages and Groups Marching Pay Honor to Accomplishments of Workers' Organizations

BAND CONCERTS GIVEN

More than 12,000 men and women participated in the labor day parade through the principal streets of the city yesterday. The line of march included 900 musicians, who made up 30 bands, and a considerable number of women, who rode in automobiles, on floats or in carriages or walked.

One group of women held the long streamers which came down on all sides of a banner heading the Boot and Shoe Workers union, women ticket sellers on the Elevated rode in an automobile, women shoe workers in observation cars along with executive boards of the Ladies Garment Workers union and the United Garment Workers union.

Band concerts were given in the afternoon on Boston Common under the direction of Theron D. Perkins, and in the evening on Franklin field under the leadership of D. C. Ives. Fireworks closed the day's program given by the city.

Austin Fales was chief marshal of the parade and he was assisted by Miss Anna T. Bowen. Miss May Matthews, president of the Boston Telephone Operators union, commanded the delegates of the Boston Central Labor Union.

The line moved out of Copley square and passed into Dartmouth street. Going through Dartmouth street to Columbus avenue, to Berkeley street to Dover street, to Washington street to School street, where it was reviewed by Mayor Fitzgerald and members of the city government. Thence it moved along Tremont street to Boylston street and was reviewed by Chief Marshal Fales, Marshal Jeremiah J. Donovan of the building trades department division, President James T. Moriarty of the Boston Central Labor Union and their staffs from a stand on the Common, opposite Park square.

The horseshoers' union, which had a forge on a float, presented Mayor Fitzgerald and the marshals with silver horseshoes.

The line of paraders began with an organization of strikers from the plant of Governor Foss in Hyde Park and ended with the United Garment Workers.

The typographical union paraded by chapels.

The Boston Street Carmen's union was headed by the 34 delegates to the international convention of the organization at Salt Lake City. Near the head of their line was a carriage containing Fred Fay, James H. Vahey and John C. Feeney. There was also an observation car with about 50 of the women of the union. There were 1000 of the blue uniformed men, 476 of the shop men and 324 of the men engaged in other lines of work.

The stationary engineers headed the first regular division of the parade.

The United Association of Steamfitters carried blue pennants. Behind them came the Bridge and Structural Ironworkers.

The barbers in white coats came out in force. There were nearly 700 members of union 25 of the teamsters in line. The members of Coal Teamsters 68 turned out 456 men. There were 700 of the Ladies Garment Workers Union members in line, more than 100 of whom were women. The organizations of freight handlers turned out nearly 1500 men. The bakers, in white suits, made a total showing of 324.

The United Garment Workers turned out over 1000, including many women. Most of those in this line carried red pennants and the banner of one of the unions bore the urging of Carl Marx: "Workers of the World Unite."

Social talks, and entertainments were held by the unions in the afternoon and evening.

TAUNTON—With Governor Foss as its guest, the Whittenton Board of Trade conducted yesterday a big Labor day celebration.

The Governor rode in the parade, enjoyed a clambake at Sabbatia park and afterward spoke.

He was accompanied by Major Green of his staff.

In the fire department turnout was the old engine, Elizabeth Poole, built in 1803, together with the newest motor apparatus in the department, Deputy Chief Galligan commanding.

NEW ALARMS ARE NON-INTERFERING

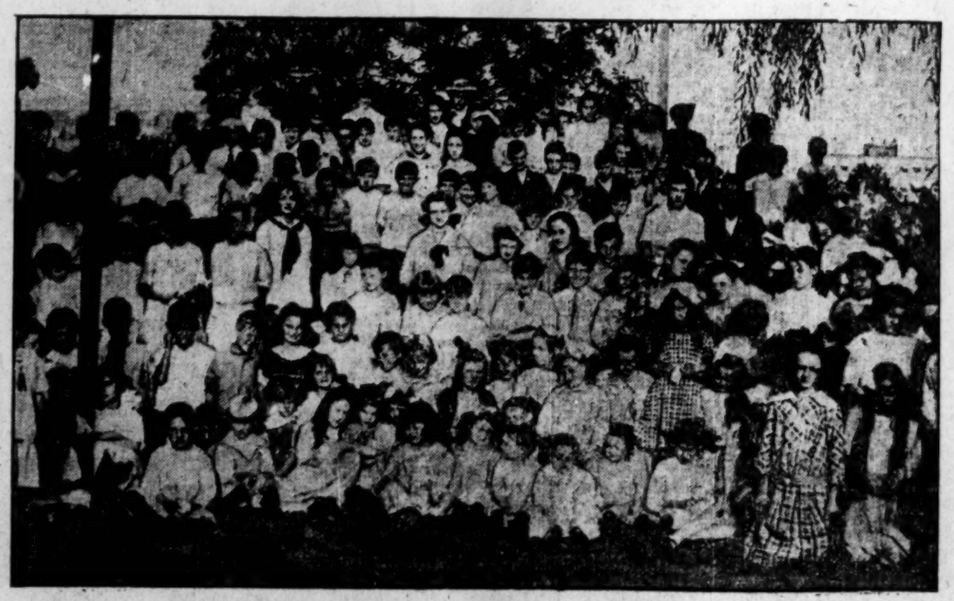

A number of the new fire alarm boxes being installed by the Boston fire department recently are known as the succession non-interfering type.

If one is pulled on the same circuit with another box the succession box will run within itself but will not interfere with the box pulled first. It will, however, register at the fire alarm bureau after the first box stops. A porcelain knob operates the new type of boxes by a slight downward pressure, succeeding the hook in use on the older boxes which must be pulled all the way down.

NORTH YAKIMA, MODERN CITY, NOW RISES WHERE DESERT ONCE LAY

Government Reclamation Work Has Wrought Significant Changes in Valley Round About—Fertility Brought Out in Country That Once Grew Only Sage Brush

MASONIC TEMPLE'S UNIQUE FEATURES

NORTH YAKIMA, Wash.—The remarkable growth and development of the state of Washington is well illustrated by North Yakima and the now famous Yakima valley. Twenty-seven years ago North Yakima was moving. It is still moving, but not in the same sense of the word.

At that time the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the land owners along the Yakima river failed to agree upon the location of a townsite. Four miles above the town originally called Yakima, the railroad company owned a tract of land which is platted and called North Yakima. Here it offered free sites to all people who wished to move their places of business from "Old Town" to

MASONIC TEMPLE IN NORTH YAKIMA

Structure which is home of the Yakima Commercial Club was erected at a cost of $200,000, occupying important place in western city the new location, and for weeks there was a procession of business buildings, hotels, and dwellings, mounted on wheels and slowly moving to the new town; business being conducted by the merchants and bankers during the slow process.

North Yakima today is a city of about 18,000 population and, unlike some other cities that have grown rapidly, has not experienced a boom and the setbacks which frequently follow.

Twenty-seven years has witnessed great changes in the country tributary to North Yakima. Where the Yakima valley was a desert, inhabited only by coyotes and jack-rabbits, the only product of the soil being sagebrush, North Yakima today is the center of one of the richest agricultural sections in the United States. The government has spent $6,500,000 in the reclamation of the intensely fertile soil of the Yakima valley and it is planned to expend $7,000,000 more. Approximately $6,000,000 has been invested by private enterprise, and plans for the expenditure of $10,000,000 on a high line canal that will bring under irrigation about 175,000 acres are now being completed.

Yakima Valley Production

The Tieton project, recently completed by the government, brought under irrigation 35,000 acres of land, making 300,000 acres now under cultivation in the Yakima valley. Here a man may, without the investment of capital, secure a tract of land either by rental or contract to purchase, and own his own farm free of encumbrance within a few years.

Yakima valley has gained a wide reputation through the quality of the apples which are raised, and the wonderful production of a small acreage makes the industry extremely profitable. All kinds of deciduous fruits are grown, including apples, peaches, pears, plums, prunes, apricots, cherries and great varieties of berries. Fruit is not the only product of the soil, however; quantities of potatoes, alfalfa, hay and hops, or practically anything that grows in the temperate zone is produced in great abundance. Shipments in 1912 totaled 9000 carloads of fruit, 15,000 carloads of hay, 3000 carlads of potatoes and 2100 carloads of hops, besides shipment of other produce of which no record was kept.

North Yakima, being the logical center of this rich territory, has increased steadily in population. The city within the last three years has become a railroad center, having two transcontinental railroads, and another now is building toward the city. Branch roads extend from North Yakima into the numerous tributary valleys, making it the shipping center of the territory. Most of the railroads of the Northwest are desirous of extending their lines to North Yakima, in order to secure some of the rapidly increasing tonnage of produce. An estimate based upon the number of fruit trees now set out in the Yakima valley, but not yet in bearing, places the production in 1920 at 50,000 carloads, and with the proportionate increase of other products the railroads are eagerly seeking entrance to a section that promises such returns.

In North Yakima the temperature seldom reaches extremes, the heat in summer being moderated by breezes from the white-capped mountains of the Cascades, visible from the city, and the cold by breezes from the Japan current. Government reports show that North Yakima has on an average 300 days of sunshine each year. The low rainfall makes irrigation necessary in raising all crops. The never-failing water-supply from the Cascade mountains, the warm, sunshiny days and extraordinary fertility of the soil make possible the production of enormous quantities of perfect fruit.

City's Development

North Yakima is a modern city; it has excellent educational advantages, there being nine grammar and high schools in the city. In addition to the public schools there are several private schools and business colleges. There are handsome and commodious church buildings. The city has many miles of wide paved streets, lined with rows of shade trees, and many beautiful residences and substantial business blocks. Among some of the large buildings are the Federal building, which cost $250,000, and the Masonic temple, recently completed at a cost of $200,000. This building contains the only reproduction of the inner chamber of King Solomon's temple in existence. A special study of this work was made by the architects and as far as possible it has been reproduced in every detail.

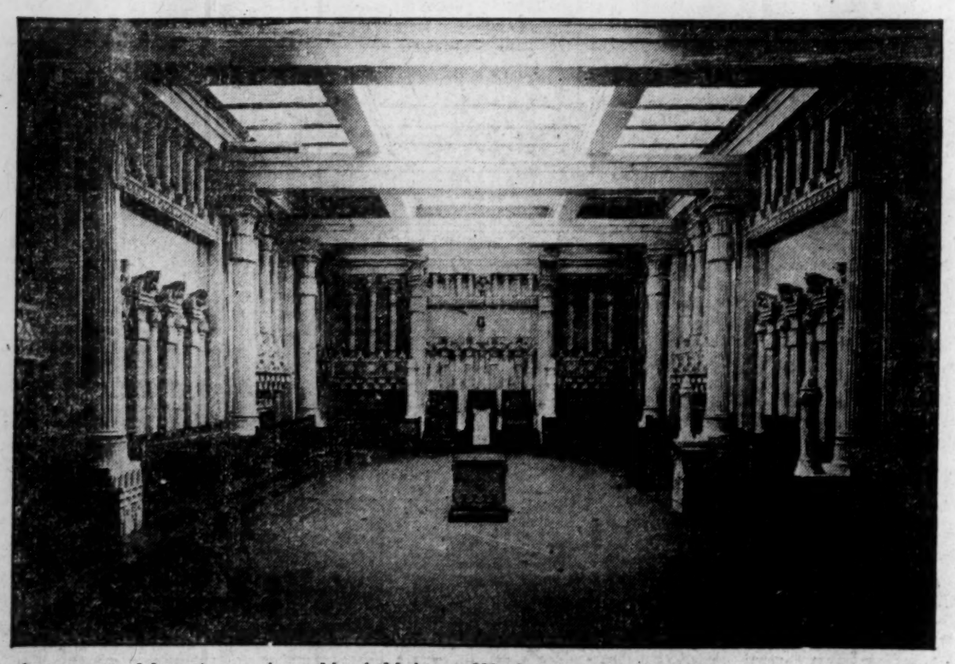

As a manufacturing, wholesale and jobbing center, North Yakima is assuming prominence rapidly. One of the largest lumber mills in the Northwest, having a capacity of 35,000,000 feet of logs yearly, is located here. There are flour mills, factories manufacturing spraying materials for use in orchards, and several canneries and evaporators. Proximity to markets and raw materials and the rapidly increasing railroad facilities are accountable for this branch of development.

North Yakima has many scenic advantages. It lies close to the Cascade mountains and there are many well-kept roads following the canyons, which are a source of much pleasure to the residents. The last session of the Washington Legislature provided funds for the building of a road from North Yakima to Tacoma which will pass through the Rainier National park, and which for scenic attractions will be unsurpassed by any road in the country, and will attract tourists from all parts of the world.

Active Commercial Club

That the citizens of North Yakima are wide awake and progressive is illustrated by the fact that the Yakima Commercial Club has a membership of 800 and maintains offices and clubrooms covering one floor in the new Masonic Temple. This club has prepared several booklets, containing reliable information concerning North Yakima and adjacent territory, for distribution among interested people. The work of the Yakima Commercial Club in the last decade has been a strong factor in the upbuilding of the city and valley, and through its efforts many new industries have been located there.

The impression received by visitors to the Yakima valley might be illustrated in the words of Booker T. Washington, who said while on a recent visit to North Yakima: "The Yakima valley is famous throughout the United States and I had heard a great deal concerning it before coming here. I have heard so-called 'boosters' describing it as I have heard them describe other sections, but until coming here I had never before visited a section where their descriptions were fulfilled. The Yakima country in reality far exceeds any description I have ever heard and is greatly beyond what I expected."

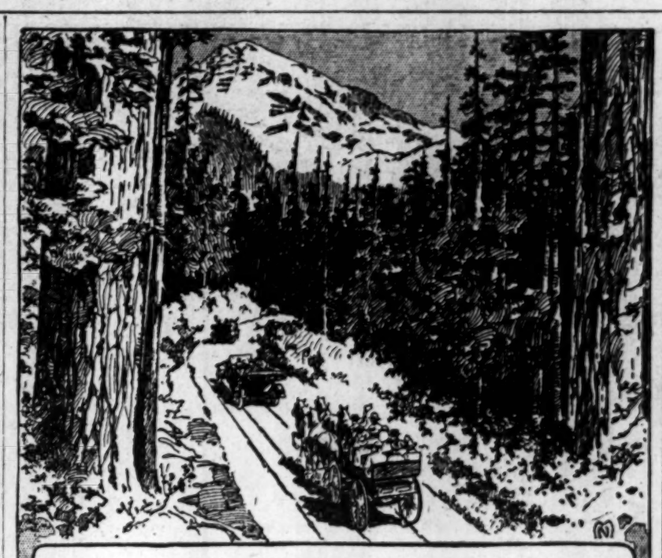

Lodge room in Masonic temple of North Yakima, Wash., constructed to represent inner chamber of King Solomon's temple

This room is considered to be the most historically correct representation of its kind in existence, architects who designed the work having made an exhaustive study of King Solomon's temple, utilizing the records of the British Museum and the best Masonic libraries. Critics say there is no other room in the world that shows so well the magnificence of the inner chamber, and world travelers have called it the most "unique and picturesque" they ever have seen.

ELECTRIC JUMPS DECIDE VOLTAGE

By measuring how far an electric current can jump through the air from one piece of metal to another, electricians can determine the voltage of a current; and it is by setting a current to making broad jumps and then scoring the feat with a tape measure that the very high voltages used nowadays are ordinarily measured, says the Saturday Evening Post.

Spark gaps, as these jump measures are called because of the great electric spark that jumps across the gap, have been made of needle points. Now it has been found that if metal spheres are used, and the electricity made to jump from one to the other, the result is more accurate, and sphere spark gaps are replacing the needle point jumps.

NEWPORT CASINO BUYS PROPERTY

NEWPORT, R. I.—One half of the old Ocean House site, just purchased by the Casino governors for $50,000, is taken by the Casino to be devoted to increasing the grounds. It is expected to install more tennis courts and make better arrangements for the annual horse show enclosure.

The front half of the property may some day be utilized for the building of a business block with reading room and club quarters.

FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

SONG IN A MAN-MADE KITCHEN

Cheery place where work is easy

THE more I see of that type of women who are so fond of calling themselves "drudges," the more I am convinced that such women are too small for their job, writes a contributor to Suburban Life. In order to get the best of anything, you must not only fill your position but "fill it to running over." Then it is that you can "chase your work, instead of letting it chase you."

Being a man, you say: "It's all very well for you to talk that way, but it's plain to be seen, you don't know what you are talking about. If you had to do kitchen work for a year, then you would change your tune." Right you are, and that's just why I am singing this tune. I had a year and a half of kitchen work—of out-and-out housework from cellar to garret. It was done to keep our home.

We had stood a year of housekeepers and, finally, father and I concluded we would try a little homekeeping on our own hook.

Then it was I discovered the unhandiness of our kitchen—what useless steps were necessary—and how cheerless and uninteresting it was.

The wall was a dull, drabby, blue-Monday color, which was enough to give anyone a worried, overworked look. Promptly I painted it a sunshiny yellow, with woodwork to match. Then we covered the floor with a soft greenish shade of linoleum, and painted the chairs and table a restful apple green. Now our kitchen has the cheery restfulness of a sunny day in June, out in the orchard. At the windows we put white curtains—not drab or dark green or dark blue, mind you, but white ones. Then that old rambling kitchen began to take on an air of happiness, and I whistled when "doing the dishes."

The next thing was to manage things so that one could stand in the middle of the room and, by taking a step or two, reach the range, the sink, the table and the open closet. The sink was moved. The pots and pans that we used every day were brought out and hung over the table and under the table, instead of in the pantry. This saved from 200 to 500 steps a day (actual count).

Then we made another discovery, and that was, how needlessly heavy and ugly most of the cooking things were. Also, how nicked most of the kitchen dishes were, and how many broken-nosed pitchers were being used "to put things away in." We figured it out that such things were both needless and unfortunate in their influence.

So we called a meeting of the finance committee and promptly appropriated $15, and bought blue-and-white agate cooking things. We "junked" the broken pitchers and handleless cups, and bought sound, attractive, inexpensive ones in their place.

We hung the pitchers up out of the way, but always within a "step's reach." And do you see how no plates or platters are set on top of each other, but are stood on edge and held up in position by upright pegs? Lots handier! You can pick out with one hand just the dish you want.

I got tired of sweeping around the legs of this table, so I yanked them off, and fastened the table to the wall with hinges and supported it by brace legs. Under the table are fastened some drawers, with shelves on either side. The drawers hold the dish towels, pieces of old muslin, and waxed paper now so useful.

Getting tired of the noise of the legged table, whenever I pulled it out to sweep, I put glass ball casters on it, so you can move it noiselessly in any direction with greatest ease. Then we got a sheet of zinc and bent the edges over and tacked it underneath. This made it not only easier to keep clean, but, when I thoughtlessly set hot kettles on it, no charred marks were left.

Between the back of the range and the wall was a space of 18 inches. Here, just back of the smoke-pipe, we suspended an old tin oven that belonged to a discarded oil-stove. In it we kept our crackers. Always they were crisp and delicious. No warming up, with the all-too-often "too brown" result.

We put five deep drawers and 10 shallow ones within handy, reachable distance just over the zinc-topped table. In the deep ones were kept flour, granulated sugar, and such much-used things. In the smaller one, confectionery sugar, sal-soda, and the like; with a drawer for strings, spoons and knives and forks, such as are needed in the kitchen.

We bought a Rochester lamp and frame, and suspended it on pulleys just over the zinc-topped table. Being counterbalanced by a weight over in the corner, we could pull it up and down whenever we wanted to change the position of the lamp.

Of course, these various changes were not all made at once, but from time to time, as the wants pronounced themselves. One of us became married, and now I hear Elvira singing happily downstairs in that man-made kitchen.

She doesn't seem to think housekeeping is such a terrible task.

Of course, Elvira didn't like "our kitchen" at first; but, now that it's "her kitchen," with her apron hanging behind the door, we are all very happy. Perhaps that kitchen helps some to make us so.

DRESSMAKING IN THE SCHOOLS

Dry goods men to assist in its encouragement

NOW that the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association has joined hands with state boards of education through the country to encourage the teaching of dressmaking in the schools, this work undoubtedly will receive considerable impetus. Although many elementary schools are teaching dressmaking, there are many localities where this feature has not been introduced in the public schools.

Since the ready-to-wear industry has reached its present proportions, and the quality of the work has been so improved that one may buy all apparel ready-made in the shops, it has relieved the home dressmakers of so much work that the teaching of dressmaking to the girls has not seemed so necessary as it did at one time when girls were expected to make their own dresses. Formerly the education of a girl was regarded as but half completed unless she could sew and cook, but with the various demands which were made on a girl's time as the years advanced these once so-called "accomplishments" were looked upon as being old-fashioned. The pendulum swung so far to that side that there necessarily came a reaction and the advance made by the practically inclined educators has made a radical change in public opinion.

For many years the sale of dress goods has been greatly reduced by the sale of ready-to-wear garments and the comparatively small amount of home dressmaking that has been done, and how to increase sales has been a problem with managers of these departments. The intention expressed at the last meeting of the Jobbers' Association of dress fabrics buyers to push the teaching of dressmaking in the elementary schools is a far-reaching plan to increase sales of yard goods, and one that will be of much benefit to young girls of the present time and to future homemakers.

The association hopes to make sufficient progress with the various state boards so that the subject may be presented to the national convention of educators which will convene next year in California.

PIN PROBLEM READILY SOLVED

Simple little contrivance for sewing machine

WHAT to do with pins when a woman is at the sewing machine is sometimes a puzzle. The usual small cushion which is kept at the side of the machine is too far from the work to be convenient when one wants to take out the pins as she is stitching. Worse yet is the practise of throwing them carelessly upon the machine, for they are liable to fall on the floor, making extra work. The pin tray which is used by many is satisfactory in some ways, but the objection to it is that the pins cannot be picked up so quickly as they may be from a cushion, and if it is pushed or jarred from the machine much time is wasted in picking up the pins.

In walking through a shirtwaist factory some time ago there was seen a simple little contrivance which solved this problem perfectly. A long piece of flannel was wound around the arm of each machine where it would not interfere with the wheel or the thread, and just thick enough to make a good cushion. The strip of flannel was three inches wide and the length required depends upon the thickness, with ordinary weight flannel or outing flannel three quarters of a yard would be sufficient. After it is wound, it may be pinned or sewed underneath the arm where it will not show, and the front of it used for pins and the back of the cushion for needles. Since the trip to the factory this little device has been tried by several home and professional dressmakers and has proven so satisfactory that they wonder why they did not think of it before.

BROWN SAUCE

Brown sauce, for use with meat and vegetables, can be made in this way, says the Chicago Record-Herald. Melt a teaspoonful of butter in an iron frying pan. Brown it without burning it and then add a rounded tablespoonful of flour. Stir the mixture until it is very brown. Then add a cupful of hot meat stock, made by stewing any scraps of meat with a few left over vegetables. Cook until smooth and then season with salt, pepper, a little catsup and a few chopped mushrooms.

USE OF PARAFFIN

When using paraffin for covering jellies possibly you have been troubled by seeing the preserve work up at the side of the glass. To prevent this, says the Ladies Home Journal, be sure to tip the glass slightly all around while the paraffin is hot; then all air spaces will be filled in and the trouble avoided.

BELTED COAT IS SMART STYLE

Simple and somewhat in Balkan fashion

THE belted coat is essentially smart and this one with its elongated waist and broad band of the Balkan idea is so youthful in style that it is peculiarly well adapted to young girls and to small women. The garment is a smart one, yet absolutely simple. It is the easiest in the world to fit and the home dressmaker will find it a boon.

The body portion is made with only shoulder and under-arm seams and is gathered at the lower edge. The peplum is perfectly smooth and the belt conceals the joining of the two. The coat is in the height of style both with skirt to match, making an entire costume, and made from silk or other seasonable material to be worn over a contrasting skirt.

For the 16 year size, the coat will require 4 yards of material 27, 2⅝ yards 36, or 2¼ yards 44 inches wide, with ⅛ yard 21 inches wide for the collar, ⅜ yard for the collar and cuffs shown in the back view.

The pattern of the coat (7953) is cut in sizes for misses of 14, 16 and 18 years. It can be bought at any May Manton agency, or will be sent by mail. Address 102 West Thirty-second street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

LAUNDRY SAVING

If a roll of tissue paper toweling is kept in the kitchen and used when baking or cooking the result will be a saving of cloth towels and laundry work will be vastly lessened.—Los Angeles Express.

FROCKS OF SILK FOR FALL DAYS

Flounced skirts exceedingly fashionable

WHEREAS the divisions of the wardrobe used to be two—comprising winter and summer wearables, womankind must now have four sets of costumes for spring, summer, autumn and winter. Spring and fall garb in Paris is called demi-saison wear and includes frocks, wraps, footwear and millinery suitable for days that are neither cold enough for furs nor warm enough for diaphanous effects. One reason the Frenchwoman is always well dressed is because she takes special heed to have her demi-saison garb fresh, attractive and modern to a degree. It is better to risk being a bit shabby and passe in midwinter and midsummer, than at the time when the seasons are changing and shops are filled with new clothes.

The practical little silk frock for runabout wear will be much in evidence this autumn, and women who are wise are having these little frocks made up now, while the dressmakers are not rushed with autumn orders, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The general outlines of costumes have changed little and easily corseted figures, generous waistlines, loosely bloused bodices and skirts draped closely to the limbs will remain very much as they have been during the last twelvemonth; but there are certain little details of trimming, of color and of accessories that give definite newness to new models and make old ones hopelessly passe.

For one thing, skirts are to be shorter—even the dressy frock for formal wear having a skirt that escapes the ground. All skirts, however, cling closely around the ankles and knees, and this awkwardness but tends to reveal dainty footwear to better advantage. All the drapery in the new skirts is at the front and a lifted-in-front effect is the very smartest effect of the moment. At the back, the skirt does not fall straight from belt to foot, but draws in a little, below the hips, giving the figure, en silhouette, a graceful, relaxed line which is essentially feminine.

Few skirts are trimmed at all, the trimming being massed on bodice and sleeve, or added in the form of a sash. Sashes are one of the important features of autumn costume, and the smartest of them are knotted low on the figure—sometimes almost at the knee, at the back. Little apron tunics, hanging just below the hips all around, though a little longer in back than in front, also add a new line to the skirt. Sometimes these tunics are plaited, sometimes—when made of very soft fabric, like chiffon or crepe de chine, they are simply gathered, and weights are stitched into the hem to make the lower edge fall limp and straight.

Flounced skirts are just now exceedingly fashionable in Paris. Scalloped flounces are especially modish; and often the scallops are piped with silk of contrasting color. Plaid and striped silks are much used for garnishing silks of solid, darker color, and the Roman and Bayadere stripings are to have—so says Paris—a tremendous vogue in trimming effects.

All the soft, satiny silks are in favor for fall frocks—charmeuse, crepe meteor, crepe de chine and brocade crepe retaining their place in popular esteem, but the satiny silks with a wee rib in the weave, like faille and the new silk called duventine, are the ultra smart novelties in this line.

SIMPLE SOUPS FOR COOL DAYS

Light and seasonable compounds

FOR the past few months we have all been more or less content to leave soup off our menus, but with the approach of cooler weather it once more takes its accustomed place, says the Womans Magazine. While rich and heavy meat soups are not yet inviting, a delicate fish or vegetable soup will be found appetizing. From among these light and seasonable soups the following have been selected:

Tomato Soup—Cook a quart can of tomatoes, or its equivalent in fresh, for 20 minutes, then rub through a fine sieve. Season with salt and pepper and a few drops of onion juice. Cook a quart of milk in the double boiler, adding, when at the boiling point, two tablespoonfuls of flour stirred smooth in a little cold milk. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter. Now beat the yolks of two or three eggs in a tureen, pour the milk into the tomatoes and this mixture into the tureen over the eggs, beating vigorously so they will not curdle. Sprinkle finely cut parsley over the top and serve very hot with croutons or bread sticks.

Onion Soup—Fry two or three large onions in butter or clarified drippings. When soft, add three tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until cooked and frothy. Now add slowly a pint of boiling water, stirring until smooth and slightly thickened. Have ready three potatoes boiled and mashed and add to them a quart of milk that has been brought just to the scalding point. Put the potato and onion mixture together, season with salt and pepper, let it get very hot, then press through a strainer into a hot tureen. Sprinkle over the top a little parsley minced fine and a handful of crisp croutons.

Lobster Soup—Pick out the meat of a small lobster and with a silver knife cut it in small pieces. Mix with it three crackers rolled fine, salt and a speck of cayenne and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Add gradually a pint of scalding milk, stirring all the while. Boil up once and serve.

French bouille—Put in a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of wheat flour, a dessertspoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Mix to a smooth paste and add a quart of hot milk. Cook in a double boiler until thickened and serve with crisp croutons and a dash of pepper. The hot milk will be found stimulating, yet delicate, proving just the soup one requires for a hot day.

Potage a la Crecy—Scrape four large carrots and cut fine. Add two potatoes peeled and diced, two onions and two stalks of celery cut fine and fry brown in good beef drippings. Then put into a saucepan with a quart of boiling water and cook until all the vegetables are tender. Press through a coarse sieve and return to the fire with the addition of a tablespoonful of butter, a half teaspoonful of salt, two cloves, pepper to season and a tablespoonful of minced parsley. Have ready a pint of milk scalded and thickened with a teaspoonful of cornstarch, add to the soup and serve with croutons.

Creole soup—Slice one onion and fry brown in a little butter. Add one can of tomatoes, one carrot scraped and diced, a little minced parsley, a sprig of thyme and a half dozen cloves. Put in a kettle with two quarts of water and simmer slowly for two hours. Cook two tablespoonfuls of rice and keep it where it will remain hot. When the vegetables are tender rub through a sieve, season to taste with salt and pepper, add the rice, simmer 10 minutes longer and serve.

SHOE POLISH

If your shoe polish or paste has hardened, as it does if left uncovered, put a little kerosene on it and it will soften and be as good as ever, according to the Ladies' World.

WRAPPED BREAD WARMED TENDER

IN some European countries it is against the law to sell fresh bread. The authorities regard it as unwholesome. We of this country, on the other hand, must have our bread fresh as we can get it, and some even want it fresh from the oven, says the Youth's Companion. But since the practise has arisen of wrapping each loaf in paper, those who like their bread hot have been complaining. If the bread is wrapped when it first comes from the oven, it grows moist and of unpleasant taste. The bureau of chemistry regards the wrapping as so important to cleanliness that it has been making some experiments to satisfy the lovers of warm bread. It now announces that if a cold-wrapped loaf is unwrapped and placed in a pan in the oven in a medium heat for about ten minutes, it will become like new, crisp without and tender within.

TRIED RECIPES

HOT COMPOTE OF PEARS

PARE, core, slice and stew five or six pears. Pick to pieces four bananas which have been macerated in lemon juice. Cover the bottom of a pudding dish with a half inch layer of crumbs. On this put alternate spoonfuls of hot pear sauce and bananas, using all, and then one small cup sugar. Over this pour the juice of two oranges; cover with another half inch layer of crumbs; moisten with half a cup thick cream and bake a decided brown.

PEAR TART

Line a low round cake pan with puff paste and fill it three quarters with peeled, cored, steamed and sliced pears, arranging them in regular layers and sprinkling with sugar. Bake until the pears are very soft, then pour over a custard made of one pint of milk, two beaten eggs and five drops almond essence. Return to the oven and bake until the custard is set. When cold, pour over a thin coating of melted currant jelly.

CHOCOLATE PEARS

Peel and core six pears and parboil in slightly sweetened water. When the fruit is half done, place in a pudding dish; sprinkle with four tablespoons sugar and bake until soft. Reduce the cooking water by rapid boiling to one cup. Dissolve in it three tablespoons grated chocolate; add half a cup of rich cream; flavor with vanilla and pour over the pears. Cooking pears are of such a negative flavor they need the addition of other fruit or flavoring to give zest to them. In this case it is supplied by the chocolate and vanilla.

PICKLED WATERMELON RIND

Remove a thick paring, about a third of an inch, from the rind of watermelon and cut out all the pink part. Then cut in pieces two by four and a half inches. Put in a kettle, cover with boiling water and cook until soft, then drain. Put three and a half pounds of the rind in a preserving kettle and add one and a half cups of vinegar, one and a half pounds of brown sugar, half ounce stick cinnamon (broken in pieces) and one quarter ounce whole cloves. Bring slowly to boiling point and let simmer two and a half hours. Pack in pint jars and add syrup to overflow jars.

FRUIT CREAM WITH MARSHMALLOWS

Mince and melt one pound marshmallows in one pint hot fruit juice (strawberry or pineapple, with the pulp); boil one cup water and two cups sugar till it threads; stir into it the beaten whites of two eggs; add the marshmallows and one tablespoon lemon juice and beat till cold. Fold in one or two cups of thick cream, whipped stiff. Freeze. Serve with maraschino cherries as a sauce.—San Francisco Call.

HOME HELPS

Cook carrots and beets whole, then skin and slice.

• • •

Avoid cooking vegetables in an iron kettle.

• • •

Any chance of tins rusting is prevented by placing then near the heat for a little while after they have been washed.

• • •

To soften brown sugar when it has become lumpy, stand it over a vessel filled with boiling water.

• • •

A quantity of quicklime put into a damp cupboard for a few days will absorb the dampness.

• • •

Turpentine or benzine will remove paint stains.

• • •

KNITTED SUIT

For the woman or girl going to the mountains a knitted suit is recommended by the New Haven Journal-Courier. Coat and skirt are separate. The elasticity of the skirt is delightful for walking and climbing. White, gray or wood brown are fashionable colors. Worn with this suit is a knotted cap with long scarf ends, which may be wrapped around the neck.

PEAR PRODUCTION INCREASING

But still not equal to the demand

PEAR production is nowhere equal to the demand, and there are signs of a new enthusiasm in the way of planting. Many of the sorts that have recently been sent out will not, however, stand the test, either in quality or in hardiness. At the same time many of the best of the older sorts are worthless where the owners do not understand the pear problem, writes E. P. Powell in the Country Gentleman.

Pear growers must understand that the fruit has to be picked from five to ten days before it becomes soft. A Clapp's Favorite rightly ripened is delicious, but if left on the trees it will rot at the core and will be flavorless. A Bartlett ripened on the tree has none of the characteristics which it attains if ripened in a dark room. Unfortunately most of the fruit that is found in market, unless shipped from a distance, has been ripened on the trees. A few sorts will endure this, like the Rostiezer and Tyson and Onondaga; yet even these are the better for being spread in bins in cellars for a full week.

I have grown nearly all of the varieties that are generally catalogued, or that have been catalogued since 1850; and from my experience I should say that the tree will endure more neglect than the apple tree and is tougher and longer-lived. I can show you apple trees bearing good crops at a hundred and twenty years, but I can show you pear trees still bearing at twice that age.

For summer pears, either for home use or for market, the Bartlett takes precedence, followed closely by Clapp's Favorite, rightly ripened, and Tyson. You might add to these, if you have room, the Margaret and Souvenir du Congres. The Bartlett bears very young and very heavily, and the tree needs abundant food. Its popularity for dessert use is fully equaled by its popularity as a canning and cooking pear. Clapp's Favorite is shaped something like the Bartlett, but is rather larger, and ripens a few days earlier. The tree is hardy and a vigorous grower, but inclined to send out long limbs, which it overloads with fruit. The Bartlett is generally more compact and erect. The Tyson is a good grower, but very slow in coming into bearing. When it begins to bear you will find it is always much inclined to overloading. Thin the fruit even if the tree can hold it. The quality is delicious, and the size is between medium and large—that is, if thinned. The Margaret is rather small, juicy and of first quality. You will get all of these varieties in August except the Bartlett; and you will probably find it desirable to pick the Bartlett about the last of August or first of September.

A group of pears of the highest rank, ripening in September and October, would consist of the Sheldon, Seckel, Worden Seckel, Howell, Flemish Beauty and Duchesse d'Angouleme.

I have placed the Sheldon at the head of this group because it fairly stands there. It is in the old bergamot family; green and flat, with a russet skin and a purple cheek. It is not extremely handsome, but the quality is hardly surpassed by any pear yet produced. The tree grows very erect and tall, and is rather brittle. The Sheldon bears very heavy crops in its prime, but will sometimes miss a year. The Seckel is a round tree, rarely very large, and loaded with fruit regularly. It is called the standard of excellence among pears. It is not quite so popular in market as it used to be when it brought $9 or $10 a barrel, but you are not likely to overplant if you are planting for market.

Worden Seckel is a new pear of medium size, somewhat like the Seckel, only the fruit comes in clusters. It is much liked by pear lovers, and by many is considered equal to the Seckel. The Howell is a clean-growing tree, strong and prolific; while the pear is large, smooth and very sweet flavored. The Duchesse is a very large pear, rather coarse, and is best when grown on quince. The Superfin is a smooth, bright-yellow pear of fair quality, and the most reliable bearer in the orchard. If picked early it is a good market pear.

We come now to a group for early winter. This should be headed by the king of pears, the Anjou, followed by the Lawrence, Reeder and Winter Nelis.

HOUSEWIFE WHO WASTES NOT

She gives some of her methods of economy

WE HAVE an income that makes it unnecessary to stint ourselves or to economize vigorously, as many do, but I have always believed that it is wicked to waste or allow things to spoil," a housewife writes, in the Dallas News. "If you cannot use these things, give them to some one who can. My definition of economy is 'to make the best use of what we have.' I make my own baking powder, which is wholesome as well as cheap. To one pound of cream of tartar use one pound of saleratus or baking soda and one eighth of a pound of corn starch. Sift several times, so that they are mixed thoroughly and place in glass jars or tin cans in a dry place. It will not injure if it lumps a little; just crush as you would saleratus and use much less of this than any other you ever used, for it is much stronger.

"Two of my friends have an economical way of preparing fat for cooking. One buys the best dairy butter about the last of June, when it is usually cheapest, and melts it slowly, so that it will not scorch. By this means the salt and any buttermilk that may be in it settle to the bottom. Then the fat is placed in glass jars and covered tightly and placed in a cool place, where it keeps for cooking purposes the entire year. It can not spoil and saves from 10 to 20 cents a pound.

"The other friend buys a fat goose and skins it, removing every bit of fat from outside, and also much from inside the fowl, washes it thoroughly and renders; turns it into glass jars, seals and places in a cool place. Use for cooking in any place, the same as butter; also for pie crust. It is excellent. Make a little weak brine and place the legs and breast in the brine for a few days to use after the rest of the goose has been used. Often the fat more than pays the expense of the goose.

"I live in Oklahoma where I can buy the underground wheat that is ready for milling and look over, using two cups at a time. Wash thoroughly and place in large earthen baking dish, bean jar, or large casserole, with four cups of cold water and a little salt. Dish must cover tightly. Bake for hours, and you will find it the most delicious cereal you ever ate. This quantity will serve four people for three mornings. The cost is 1c a meal. It is jellied when cooked properly. If you have to keep a fire for it, of course it is not economy. It can be cooked equally as well in a fireless cooker, but it must be put in a double boiler in cold water and boiled for five or ten minutes before placing in cooler. If baked in range, watch it so that it dosn't get dry. I bake mine the day I iron and often the next day too.

"By using the old table linen during the winter months your linen bill will be greatly reduced. Try using a small table cloth over a large one, as the hotels and dining cars do. It saves washing and ironing as well as linen.

"We buy everything possible in large quantities."

The Opening of the School Year Is Just Ahead

The Educational Department is prepared to furnish circulars, catalogues and information about schools and colleges in many parts of this country and abroad.

When making your decisions as to which school your boy or girl should attend, this service we are so well able to furnish you, may make the selection simpler.

In making inquiries to this department it will be helpful if you will state the location and requirements desired.

American Toiler Is Historian's Theme

IN the autobiography of Edward Gibbon he was confidential and self-revealing enough to describe, in a memorable passage, the sensations experienced by him as he wrote the last works of his magnum opus. The work that he conceived in 1764, while he sat musing amidst the ruins of the Capitol on the banks of the Tiber, he finished on a summer night of June, 1787, sitting in his garden in Lausanne, Switzerland.

The record runs thus: "After laying down my pen, I took several turns in a bereeau or covered walk of acacias, which commands a prospect of the country, the lake and the mountains. The air was temperate, the sky was serene, the silver orb of the moon was reflected from the waters, and all nature was silent. I will not dissemble the first emotions of joy on the recovery of my freedom, and, perhaps, the establishment of my fame. But my pride was soon humbled, and a sober melancholy was spread over my mind, by the idea that I was taking an everlasting leave of an old and agreeable companion, and that whatsoever might be the future date of my history the life of the historian must be short and precarious."

Even minor historians, lesser men than Gibbon, who have finished their confining tasks as makers of books will appreciate this record, part of which is thus quoted. No author who has put himself and years of time and research into a chronicle and interpretation of history, however limited in scope and parochial in its vistas, can come to the end of his task without some such inward experience as Gibbon had. But men vary as to the publicity which they give to this emotion. Gibbon fortunately registered his where posterity could ponder on it.

A reviewer taking up the eighth and last volume of the History of the People of the United States by John Bach McMaster (D. Appleton & Co. $2.50) finds nothing in foreword or postscript to indicate what similar thoughts passed through the mind of this delver into the life of the American public during the period from the revolution to the civil war. The first of the eight volumes appeared in 1883. That is to say labor and thought have been concentrated on this task for more than 30 years. Not exclusively, to be sure, for Professor McMasters has been a prolific writer of other books, on problems of engineering as well as on history and social evolution. Besides he has been a popular teacher in a large urban university. But, broadly speaking, this history has been his life work, and by it he will live on.

If the title of the work is scrutinized it reveals the distinguishing feature of the book. Prior American historians had emphasized the romantic, religious or political aspects of national history. Professor McMaster appeared on the scenes when a different ideal made its appeal. The adventures of the discoverers, the hardships of the pioneers, the political ambitions, experiments and revolts of the colonists, the theologies and polities of the ecclesiastics, the principles and tactics of the statesmen and the battles of the soldiers had all been depicted by men of the school of Sparks, Bancroft, Palfrey and Parkman. Motley and Prescott had brought fame to their country and to themselves by excursions into the history of other nations. McMaster was one of the first of his generation to feel and respond to the growing demand for a historical narrative that would deal with more mundane things and with the doings of the plain American people in their social evolutions, as tillers of the soil, builders of highways, inventors of machinery, settlers of the inland prairies and traders on the highways of the seven seas and the great inland lakes and rivers.

Not that he decided to write history from the standpoint of economic determinism solely. That was left for a later school. But he decided to base his work on depictions of the abiding, humble but fundamental and common doings of the people, native and foreign born, without whom there could be no politics, no change in law, literature and religion. To this end he delved in newspapers, diaries and journals of successive generations rather more than in the state papers of executives and the journals of legislative bodies. His narrative consequently was realistic and descriptive rather than idealistic and philosophical. Events and contemporary opinions about them, rather than his own interpretations of the same, were the main contents of each volume as it appeared. The reader was credited with intelligence enough to draw his own conclusions, and was not perpetually told what he ought to think. There as no attempt to be rhetorical and brilliant, but only lucid and informing. Stones that other builders rejected he worked into his mosaiac of chronicle. Not his to reason why. His but to show the facts of ordinary existence on farm, in shop and along the thoroughfares of trade and commerce, and the reflex influence, on forces usually rated as determinative by other historians, of those factors of existence that are best met and controlled by dependence on the common virtues and by common sense and thrift.

Thus, for instance, in this last volume, while there is due attention to the anti-slavery controversy in and out of Congress, to the threats of secession and the final decision of the South to break away from the Union, and to the doings and the sayings of men like Calhoun, Webster, John Brown and Seward, and to the passing of the Whig and the birth of the Republican party, the distinctive contribution of the book is in those portions of it which describe the discovery of gold in California, the subsequent great trek across the prairies, the beginnings of Pacific coast anti-Asiatic hostility, the rise of Mormonism, the Know-nothing uprising, the evolution of the railway system of the country, the first stirrings of militant organized labor, the insurgence of woman and the inception of what has come to be known as feminism, and the national crusade against intemperance. Even when the more distinctively conventional political phases of history are dealt with and elaborated it is on the basis of evidence as near the popular understanding and heart as it is possible to obtain.

The country is not so prolific in historians of eminence today that it can afford to overlook the worth of a history of the nation during such a crucial period written with such conscientiousness and so full of the results of research in fields previously untilled. It is not the highest type of history; neither is it the lowest form. It is never commonplace, though dealing much with the more common, non-romantic and unconventional aspects of life. It does not pretend to be what it is not. The author is not a prose poet like Carylyle nor a great artist like Parkman nor a combined stylist and philosopher like John Fiske. Neither, on the other hand, is he a mere annalist and data collector like so many latter-day writers of history who are under the influence of Germanic models and who are content with making monographs.

LITERARY NOTES

LORD ROSEBERY IN LETTER ATTACKS MANUSCRIPT SALE

(Special to the Monitor)

GLASGOW, Scotland—In a letter to the chairman of the Glasgow and District Burns Clubs Associations with reference to the sale of the Glenriddel MSS, which has already been dealt with in The Christian Science Monitor, Lord Rosebery says: The conduct of the directors of the Liverpool Athenaeum seems incredible. One would have thought that the second or third city in the empire would have insisted on keeping so precious a possession. I have indeed little doubt that the MSS. never belonged to Mrs. Currie at all, but were entrusted to her husband's father for biographical purposes. The widow probably found them among her papers, made no question as to the property, and thought she was doing a wise thing in transferring these precious documents to the care of the Liverpool Athenaeum. Nor was it the duty of the Liverpool Athenaeum on receiving them to scrutinize their title to them. But it certainly was incumbent on the directors before selling them to make quite sure that Mrs. Currie was justified in giving them, and that they were justified in selling them.

WATER LEAGUE TO MEET IN TEXAS

LAKE CHARLES, La.—The ninth annual convention of the Interstate Waterway League of Louisiana and Texas will be held in Orange, Tex., Oct. 17, and 18, according to the Dallas News.

The announced purposes of the convention, as embodied in a statement made public by General Secretary Leon Locke, are to "secure recognition of the intercoastal canal as one project and not section by section as heretofore; to urge the completion of the unfinished sections without further delay, and to demand a deeper and wider canal than the present construction."

GT. BARRINGTON WINS LENOX CUP

LENOX, Mass.—Lenox held a firemen's muster yesterday afternoon consisting of a parade, hose races and field and track events.

The silver cup for the best appearing company was awarded to the Great Barrington veteran firemen. The organizations participating the parade were Great Barrington, Winsted, Lee and Lenox.

BETA THETA PI MEN CONVENING AT NANTASKET

Beta Theta Pi men open their seventy-fourth annual convention at the Atlantic House, Nantasket, today. The sessions will be continued tomorrow, Thursday and Friday. Business of the convention will occupy the greater part of the day today, tomorrow and Thursday, but many kinds of sports have been arranged including tennis, bathing, water events and ball games.

A shore dinner and entertainment is the feature arranged for tonight, and Thursday night the chief social function of the convention—the dinner—will be held. Justice Horace H. Lurton, Francis H. Sisson, former Governor John L. Bates and Francis W. Shepardson are on the program as speakers, and Willis O. Robb will be toastmaster.

Friday an automobile trip to places of historic interest around Boston is planned. There are 72 regular delegates and an attendance of 500 or 600 is expected during the week.

NORTH ADAMS HAS FIREMEN'S MUSTER

NORTH ADAMS, Mass. — Fourteen companies contested in the playout at the Hoosac Valley muster Monday. It was won by the Alerts of Winchendon with a distance of 224 feet 3¾ inches. The F. M. Smith company of South Hadley Falls was second, while Chicopee and Holyoke were third and fourth, respectively.

The parade had slightly more than 1000 men in line, 20 companies and 10 musical organizations. Mayors Hurley of Salem and Burton of Ansonia, Ct., marched with their companies.

CONFERENCE HELD BY ENDEAVORERS

NOBSCOT, Mass.—W. H. Ferdinand Remmele and the Rev. Philip L. Schenk conducting the services, Christian Endeavor organizations of Middlesex county met in quarterly conference Monday at the home of Miss Margery E. Hemenway.

WORCESTER INSPECTS HOTEL

WORCESTER, Mass.—Several thousand holiday sightseers passed through the new Bancroft hotel, opened to guests for the first time, Monday. The day's registry was 100 room guests.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Mr. Bryan and Currency Bill

MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL—The combination of Secretary Bryan and the Chicago bankers' conference in support of the banking and currency bill tends to alleviate fear of its defeat by revival of old Democratic divisions. Mr. Bryan commends the bill as it stands and practically rejects the amendments demanded by the Democratic money radicals. His indorsement should remove the measure from popular suspicion and put an end to power to make it impossible. The Chicago bankers' conference indicates acceptance of the fundamental principles of the bill approved by Mr. Bryan, and assured hope of the amendments in minor detail necessary to make it workable in operation. This assurance comes from a conference with the secretary of the treasury, whose acceptance of amendments in the final draft can hardly include anything unacceptable to Mr. Bryan. This is a bigger achievement than the union of almost the whole Democratic Congress and administration on a tariff bill. It is much to bring extreme Democratic leaders together on a banking and currency bill. To make the bill so nearly acceptable to a representative assembly of bankers as to encourage them to hope of a final draft they can heartily work under as a law for the whole country is much more.

Signs of the Times

BALTIMORE NEWS—For some years past we have been treated to an apparent paradox—a steady and rapid increase in the cost of living, on the one hand, and on the other just as steady and almost as rapid an increase in savings bank deposits. The paradox is, of course, not a true one. If prices are high, it is because there is more competition in buying and, though we may not realize it from day to day, more money, properly

Cleveland's Charter Sustained

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER—Decision of the Ohio supreme court upholding the nomination and election provisions of the Cleveland charter constitutes a sweeping victory for municipal home rule in Ohio. Every contention of the city is indorsed.

The only feature of the charter which could with the slightest justice be called untried or experimental was that establishing the so-called preferential system of voting. Even that, however, had already been used elsewhere; it could not be deemed revolutionary. So the voters this fall will select their mayor and councilmen by the preferential system. Candidates will be nominated by petition, without a primary. This will mean getting accustomed to a new form of ballot and new methods of counting. Voters and election officers will have new responsibilities. Patience may be needed till the new system gets to working, proper

Of course, we had to let them pass
To make room for today.
And when today has run its race
Why need we feel a sorrow
Since we shall have, to fill its place,
A splendid, new tomorrow?

As world conditions are today, China, in her advance toward a position among the "powers" will cease to build the old-fashioned junk, with square bow, full stern and lug-sails, and turn to building up-to-date battleships costing many millions of dollars, and which will, themselves, become "junk" in something like a score of years from the date of their completion. But it may be that China will help to set the world a wiser example.

CIRCUMVENTING CIVIL SERVICE

Editorial Comment on a Connecticut Instance Raises Question of Faithfulness to Purpose of Law

IF THE report in so responsible a newspaper as the Springfield (Mass.) Republican on the appointment of carriers for a new postal free delivery service in Connecticut is accurate, there is supplied an instance of the way that the letter of the civil service laws is kept while its purpose is denied. The postmaster of Thompsonville recommends to the department at Washington the appointment as carriers of the four young men who stood highest in the civil service examinations. He pays no heed to the fact that three of them are Republicans and one a Democrat. Presently he receives from Washington a message that his report is not approved and is directed to substitute for two of the men two others, who did not stand as high on the list but have the merit of being Democrats. The story of the way the change was accomplished includes the statement that "in view of the fact that the Democrats are in power in national affairs, the Thompsonville situation seemed hardly consistent and naturally Congressman Lonergan took steps to rectify the matter."

Rectify is a happily chosen word. The devotion of a partizan congressman to the cause of a public service that was actually consistent with the fact that his party was in power could find no better exercise than rectification of the highly inconsistent operation of the merit system. It needed correction if it happened to put more members of the minority party into these new official positions and afford but one berth for his own party, the one now "in power in national affairs." It is one of the finest of recent instances of the possible usefulness of congressmen, the setting aside of the operation of the civil service law when it worked disadvantageously to the entrance of the largest possible number of his supporters into good government positions. The letter of the law is observed in the appointment of men who were duly certified and the attempt is made to mitigate any partizanship by the statement that the candidates for the places had an average but a point or two below that of the ones first named by the postmaster. A matter of a point or two or even a few points could not be considered when there was the grander question of faithfulness of the prospective letter-carriers to the party charged with the conduct of national affairs. The mail of Thompsonville will now be delivered by men who are in accord with the party that rules the nation.

The stern requirements of the merit law that the service of the country shall not be regulated by party considerations are the constant source of annoyance to congressmen who find the extent of the rewards they can deliver closely curbed. Naturally, as says the news report, they seek to rectify their severe demand that merit, the highest merit, and not party membership shall settle the appointment. The postoffice department at Washington lends itself, as is seen in this case, to the process of setting right the exclusions of so strict a law. For the purpose of this sort of rectification there is a fortunate margin in the system. The civil service examiners certify more than the required number for any particular position, if there are more that get by the minimum percentage of the examination. Then the appointing power may exercise its discretion and choose men in the lower places on the certified list if for any reason it may wish to discriminate in their favor. The reason of party favor is the moving one and it is blandly advanced as the sufficient one for disregarding the rank of the candidates.

The advance of the merit system in the American civil service has all along encountered this difficulty. It has witnessed the continual effort to take advantage of whatever margins it left and whatever loop-holes were not closed for the appointment of men not because of their fitness but because of their party belonging. It has quite too rarely found that public officials were disposed to cooperate with the intent of the law. It has been constantly subjected to the notion of those who held the appointing power that the law was to be studied for all possible variations that would permit discrimination in favor of the party in power, to which the appointing officials owed their own places.

If such instances as this in Connecticut are getting less numerous, it is a fortunate fact due more to the well developed public opinion that the service shuld be on a business basis than to any cooperation by partizans in high positions. The postal service of a generation ago was the favorite field for plunder by the parties, and it is still made to yield some profit to the diligent searchers for whatever spoils may be gathered without technical violation of the law. The chief value of an incident like this, with its unblushing statement of the "natural" interest of a congressman in getting all possible crumbs for his followers, is to point the fact that the public is no longer tolerant of the making its service a means of party and personal profit. It is yet to be developed to a point where the advantage will not be taken of every opportunity to keep the law while defying its principle.

Prof. W. H. Taft Declares Judges Should Be Appointed

Standing Committees at Second Day Session of Lawyers in Montreal Report on Improvement of Litigation Methods

RECALL CONSIDERED

Lord Haldane as Guest of Convention Talks on Growing Common Conscience in International Groups Adjusting Affairs

MONTREAL, Que.—Declaring that the supremacy of federal courts to state courts is due because law and justice prevail rather than sentiment, former President William Howard Taft this afternoon delivered an address before the American Bar Association on "The Selection and Tenure of Judges."

Arging against election of the judiciary, Professor Taft declared that the most difficult problem in a popular government is to determine a satisfactory method of selecting members of its judicial branch.

"There can be but one answer," he said, "to the query, Can we get the best judge by election or appointment? The selection can be really popular without resorting to an election. The chief executive, elected by the people to represent them in executive work, does, in appointing a judge, execute the popular will. He can search among the members of the bar. Generally he has sources of information, both of an open and confidential nature, and if he is not himself a lawyer he has an attorney-general to help him make his selection. For this reason, in every country of the world, except in the cantons of Switzerland and the United States, judges are appointed and not elected. Many states in 1845 adopted new constitutions providing for election of judges.

"Paradox as it may seem, appointed judges are more discriminatingly responsive to the needs of a community than judges chosen by the electorate, and this is because the executive is better qualified to select experts. Under the primary system, the office does not seek the man. The aspirant must campaign and seek office. Nothing could do more to impair the quality of lawyers available as candidates."

Professor Taft pointed out that the inability of Congress or the executive to affect the tenure of judges has given to the federal judiciary an independence that has made it a bulwark of the liberty of the individual.

Answering the argument that life tenure tends to make judges haughty and unresponsive to the public, Professor Taft pointed to the recent impeachment of Judge Archbald of the commerce court, as a proof that judges can be removed without the recall.

This morning the standing committee of the convention reported on litigation reform, revision of state laws recall, injunctions and other topics of the day affecting the legal profession.

The morning session of Monday was devoted to the address of welcome by Robert L. Borden, prime minister of Canada, and to the address of Frank B. Kellogg, the president of the association, on "Treaty Making Power." At the afternoon meeting Chief Justice Edward D. White of the United States supreme court presided and Viscount Haldane, lord high chancellor of Great Britain, the guest of the convention, made an address on the ethics of modern internationalism.

The day's program concluded with the conferring of honorary degrees by McGill University on William H. Taft, Viscount Haldane, Edward D. White, Robert L. Borden, Maitre F. Labori, Charles J. Doherty, Joseph H. Choate, Elihu Root, and Frank B. Kellogg.

National Groups Approved

The Rt. Hon. Richard Burdon Haldane spoke on "Higher Nationality, a Study in Law and Ethics."

Lord Haldane dwelt at some length on the difference between formulated law, whether civil or criminal, and the moral rule enjoyed by private conscience of the community, which he defined as the system of habitual or customary conduct, ethical rather than legal, which embraces all those obligations of the citizen which it is "bad form" or "not the thing" to disregard, the social penalty for which is being "cut" or looked on askance. He pointed out that without such restraint there could be no tolerable social life, and said that it was this instinctive idea of what to do and what not to do in daily life and behavior that was the source of liberty and ease, and that this obligation was the chief foundation of society.

Standing Committees Enter Reports Before Lawyers' Convention

Reports of standing committees were presented at the morning session and discussion of reports was held.

The committee on laws to prevent delay and unnecessary cost in litigation recommended that passing be urged of the technical bill, the law equity bill, and the bill in reference to writs of error in constitutional cases, all three of which are now pending before Congress.

Attention was called to the new rules for courts of equity in the United States, promulgated by the supreme court and adopted after conferences with circuit bar committees and the association committee.

Reference was made to a law enacted in Massachusetts on lines recommended by the committee. A form of bill was presented providing for reducing the expense of the serving process and a rule was advised for extending preventive justice.

Injunctions Considered

The question of injunctions in labor union cases was taken up and the idea of class legislation was deprecated, while the assertion sometimes made that labor cases are discriminated against was denied.

The committee urged that it would be a recognition of the relation of the bar and court, and to their interdependence, that the work of an association composed of the bar of the entire United States should have official recognition by the supreme court, so far as constitutional questions are concerned.

Safety Devices Urged

The committee on compensation for industrial accidents and their prevention reports in part:

"Your committee is of the opinion that industrial establishments, especially those equipped with mechanical devices, can always be equipped and conducted with a higher degree of efficiency and safety than can be required by law, and it believes that what is called the merit system of premium rating for insurance will tend greatly towards the better equipment and safer conduct of such establishments, thereby encouraging employers to equip and conduct their industrial establishments in the manner best calculated to prevent accidents; to that end premiums for workmen's compensation insurance should be arranged so as to give by the premium rating economic advantages and disadvantages according to the degree of efficiency and carefulness exercised by the employer."

Tenure of Judges Topic

On the removal of federal judges the committee on jurisprudence and law reform recommended that "where from among a learned profession a certain few are set apart as worthy to be vested with the large powers of the federal judiciary, there should be no removal from the Bench, save for grave and weighty reasons. By no procedure less imposing than that of impeachment by the representatives of the nation, in the face of the nation and on a responsibility which is felt and reverenced by the nation, should a judge be degraded.

"As to the tenure by which the federal judges hold their office, your committee is of the opinion that it should not be changed." Life tenure of state judges was approved.

Recall Opposed

The committee to oppose the judicial recall say, in part:

"The significance and danger of the judicial recall are, in many states and localities, underestimated, even by some members of our committee. Because, here and there, up to the present time, no special local demand for the judicial recall has shown itself, it seems to be considered that the adoption in 1908 in Oregon of the recall of judges, even though later followed in 1911 in California, was not necessarily indicative of the danger of its further extension.

"It has been advised by one or two members of the committee that the distribution of literature in localities where there is, as yet, no open agitation for the recall, might precipitate activity in its favor.

"The results have proven that such an attitude is not justified. The judicial recall measures are, in the first instance, enticing to those who do not really understand their significance. The result is, that in many localities a strong following in their favor has been slowly worked up, and that, where few would have thought them possible of adoption, they have been forced to a vote after a quick campaign and have either been adopted or have come very nearly to adoption.

"The result shows that the campaign of general education upon the subject, which we have undertaken, is the wisest course.

"We would respectfully recommend that the work of this association in opposition to the judicial recall be continued, upon the same lines as heretofore; and that the utmost encouragement and most liberal appropriations possible be given by this association to its committees which shall be organized each succeeding year to expose the fallacy of the judicial recall."

Jury Recommendations

The following is commended by the committee on judicial administration:

"When any person is indicted for any criminal offense or against whom has been filed an information charging a crime or misdemeanor, a copy of the indictment or information shall be furnished him, without cost, at the time of or before his arraignment or before he is called on to plead to such indictment or information, and the names and addresses of the witnesses appearing before the grand jury, in case of an indictment, shall be endorsed on the back of such indictment, and, in case of an information, the names and addresses of the witnesses, so far as known to the district attorney at the time of the filing of such information, shall be indorsed on the back thereof. Every person charged with a criminal offense other than capital shall be furnished with a list of the jury and witnesses to be produced on the trial, so far as the same may be known to the district attorney, at least one entire day before trial."

Uniformity Recommended

The committee on uniform state laws reports:

"The accomplishment of uniformity of law requires not only uniformity of statutes in the several states, but likewise uniformity of decisions under such statutes. To that end, it is earnestly urged that members of the association whenever and wherever opportunity may present itself, call to the attention of the courts the purpose of the uniform statutes, the decision of other states under their corresponding statutes, and the desirability of maintaining uniformity by the decisions in particular cases then pending before such courts, or which may thereafter be presented to them." It was recommended that the marriage evasion act, approved by the conference of commissioners on uniform state laws at Milwaukee in August, 1912, be approved.

The committee on international law noted the progress of treaties in the past year, referred to the Panama canal tolls question and noted occurrences that had brought up questions of international law. The report referred to the Japanese and Mexican questions but made no recommendations.

"It is the hope and belief of your committee," the report concludes, "that all these difficulties can and will be met by the government of the United States on a basis of justice to all, in consonance with the acknowledged principles of international law and in strict adherence to all treaty obligations interpreted, as our own supreme tribunal has declared they should be, in a spirit of the highest good faith."

The committee on patent, trade mark and copyright law presented a form of bill providing for the institution of a national court of patent appeals. The committee on publicity requested members to bear in mind in making reports of their papers to be submitted to the newspapers that the unusual and the extraordinary points are the ones to be emphasized.

Other committees making report were those on insurance law, courts of admiralty, liens on real estate, comparative law, the federal judiciary and legislative drafting.

THE THEATRICAL WORLD

MISS MAY IRWIN

Plymouth theater—Miss May Irwin in "Widow by Proxy," farce in three acts by Catherine Chisholm Cushing. First Boston performance. The cast:

Gloria Grey.....May Irwin
Dolores Pennington.....Clara Blandick
Gilligan.....Alice Johnson
Saphronia Pennington....Helen Orr Daly
Angelica Pennington..Helen Weathersby
Captain Pennington.....Orlando Daly
Alexander Galloway...Joseph Woodbury

In most of Miss Irwin's plays she gets into a comic predicament, always with the best intentions in the world. This year she is Gloria Grey, an indigent music teacher rooming with a young woman, Dolores, who supposes herself to be a widow, word to that effect having come from Alaska. Bills are pressing when news comes that Dolores has come into a small fortune which necessitates her visiting two stiff aunts of her husband. Dolores refuses to go, preferring to lose the money rather than meet the two relatives who disapproved of her marriage, because she was an actress, and who slammed the door in her face when she tried to pay a dutiful call. Gloria, however, with the very real pressure of small debts upon her, decides that they must have that money, so decides to impersonate Dolores, call on the severe aunts, and get the inheritance.

Things go swimmingly at the aunts' house for a time. Gloria pokes no end of fun at them, outsnubs them in their snobbery, and finally subdues them, because of their worship of titles, by pretending to an extensive entree into the English peerage. More than that she plunges into a belated romance with another nephew of the Pennington sisters, much to their approval. They pin a costly Spanish veil upon her head and bestow the family jewels upon her.

"The nephew rushes in with a license, sealed with a big red wafer, and in his fondness does not wonder at the ignorance of his intended regarding the appearance of such documents. "I thought they always had green seals" stammers Gloria in effort to extricate herself from her dilemma. "O, no; green seals on dog licenses." The entertainment is built up of this sort of humor, and one jest follows another so swiftly that the spectators must be nimble witted indeed to catch all the jokes. The audience chuckled almost constantly; loud laughter was frequent.

Miss Irwin's utterance is pattering and none too loud. A few persons not familiar with her methods had difficulty in understanding her. Her wit grows keener and her methods subtler every year. Always she is as wholesomely jolly as ever. Her comic touch is always accurate, in episode and in climax. A general shout went up at her handling of the scene at the end of the second act when word comes that Dolores is not a widow after all. Great is Gloria's distress, for her intended has expressed great distaste for deceit in a woman. All ends satisfactorily, however, for the characters and for Miss Irwin's admirers alike.

The supporting company is good, for though Miss Irwin is practically the whole entertainment persons of talent surround her. Miss Blandick's severe manner as Dolores gave neat contrast to Miss Irwin's buoyancy. Mr. Daly was amiable as the admirer of Gloria, and Mr. Woodbury added to the fun as a tart, unsentimental lawyer. Miss Johnson provided a piquant pictorial note as a fashionable architect of gowns. Misses Daly and Weathersby are adequate as the caricature aunts. Miss Irwin is here for a month.

B. F. KEITH'S

William Hawtrey, an able English comedian, is the leading feature of the bill at B. F. Keith's this week, appearing in a fantastic sketch that has been boiled down from a long play in which he has been seen on tour. Miss Cassie Jamieson provides good assistance.

What is probably as fine a riding act as has been seen in the varities is provided by Miss Wirth, a circus performer of note, in her equestrian feats. Other performers assist her. Williams and Wolfus have a comic sketch, "Almost a Pianist," and Ratliff and Hayden provide a song and comedy skit that was liked.

Others on the bill were the Tuscano brothers, jugglers; Flo and Wynne and the Pathes weekly news reel.

METZGER COLLEGE TO BE USED

CARLISLE, Pa.—Metzger College has been placed at the disposal of the authorities of Dickinson College, and will be used as a dormitory for women students of the latter institution, according to the Philadelphia North American.

DR. BORCHARD CHANGES WORK

WASHINGTON—Dr. Edwin M. Borchard, law librarian of Congress, has been selected by Secretary Bryan to act as one of the assistant solicitors of the department of state.

"LES MISERABLES"

With all the vividness of a clear, simple, intensely dramatic story, the adventures of Jean Valjean were traced in film pictures in Tremont Temple last evening, in Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." In presenting this version of Hugo's work care has been taken not to burden the theme with too much detail and no effort at all is required to follow the story.

The cast is strong. Henry Krauss, who plays the part of Jean Valjean, gives a powerful representation of this many-sided character. Mlle. Ventura as Fantine gives eloquence to her actions and M. Eitevant as Javert, the police inspector, is a striking figure. Both the costumes and the settings are realistic.

The strongest scene in the whole film is the rebellion of 1832, when the streets are barricaded by the citizens and martial law is proclaimed. Apart from its connection with the story this part of the film conveys a good impression of the old-time barricading in the streets of France.

Accompanying the presentation of the pictures is music from the organ in the temple, violins and a cello. Individually or collectively these instruments are well suited to the somber story.

OTHER BOSTON INTERESTS

Frank Ferguson and company appear in another comedy this week at the Bijou theater. Good music was provided by Miss Agnes Cave, soprano; Dean W. Hanscom, tenor; Stanley Tower, 'cellist. Besides the Pathes news reel the motion pictures included views of Egyptian life, scene on Bavarian lakes and Jura, France.

The "Quo Vadis" pictures have entered upon the final fortnight of their long run at the Tremont theater.

Miss Olive Wyndham in "What Happened to Mary" at the Majestic, and Sam Bernard in a musical farce at the Shubert are continuing attractions.

THE MERRY MARTYR

The Colonial theatre opened the new season Saturday evening with "The Merry Martyr," a musical farce, book and lyrics by Glen MacDonough; music by Hugo Riesenfeld. First Boston performance. The composer conducted.

The production pleased for its music, ensembles, and dances. Scenes laid in Spain readily lend themselves to brilliant light and color effects; and pretty Spanish melodies are enjoyable. Mr. Riesenfeld's music is light, florid and melodious. He has skilfully used several old Spanish motives with pleasing effect in the dance numbers.

De Bazan, a civil governor of a province in Spain who misspends government funds feels obliged to invent a revolution to save himself from bankruptcy. With the aid of his secretary he attempts a bogus attack upon his own life for which the revolutionists are blamed. For his heroic martyrdom he receives medals from the king and a wreath of laurel from the people.

Maclyn Arbuckle was humorous as the bluff and hearty civil governor who is always anxious to uphold the cause of the common people. The complications of the farce, however, seldom offered him a chance to display his full talents. John H. Goldsworthy was good as a young revolutionist and pleased in duets with Miss Dovey.

Denman Maley made a comically dry secretary. George F. Moore and Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt gave an excellent dance in act three. But the dance drama given by them in act two should be omitted. True, it is a little drama offered to deceive the English tourists visiting at the inn, but its realism is offensive.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN THIS STATE OPEN SESSIONS

In Many Towns and Cities of Commonwealth Fall Term of Education Begins

Public schools in many cities and towns throughout the state opened today for the fall term, some of them showing record enrolments, improvements in their buildings and changes in their faculties. At Concord, Mass., the registration showed 1350 pupils, an increase of nearly 100 compared with the opening of the schools last fall.

The enrolment at the Concord high school alone is 425, which is 74 more than in September, 1912. The only change in the schools here this year is the introduction of an agricultural course in the high school.

There has been six changes in the teaching staff this year. Miss Elizabeth Mayo of Exeter, N. H., succeeds Mrs. Helen W. Farrell at the high school. Miss Annie C. Witherle of Castine, Me., takes the place of Mrs. Grace L. Crockett. Miss Gertrude Rideout of the Chempsford high school is a new teacher.

In the grade schools the new teachers are Miss Agnes M. Richardson of North Easton, who will teach the sixth grade at the West Concord school, succeeding Miss Asenath E. Tarr; and Miss Eleanor Murphy of Holden, taking Miss Valerie Coon's position as the sub-primary teacher at the Peter Bulkeley and Emerson schools.

The Littleton public and high schools reopened with a record enrolment under the new principal, Charles H. Cummings. The other new teachers are: High school, Miss Lucy Robbins; West primary school, Miss Helen Bradley, and West intermediate school, Miss Hazel Bradley.

The two public schools in Sudbury opened. The Wadsworth school will be in charge of Miss Burke. Miss Grace Richardson is principal at the Landham school.

For the first time in the history of Maynard the enrolment of the Maynard high school, which opened this morning passed the 100 mark. C. W. Millar of Winchendon is the new principal of the high school. Francis S. Brick, superintendent of schools, is planning to reorganize the high school this fall. The three grade schools begin their fall session next Monday morning.

Needham public schools opened this morning, and on account of the new salary and contract arrangements the number of changes in teaching staff is the smallest for many years, only four changes being made.

The fall term of the Quincy public schools opened today. There has been a number of changes in the corps of teachers.

STATIONMASTERS CAN LIMIT DUTY SAYS 'L' WITNESS

really been a cut, Mr. Nesdale declared that there had been no raise in wages since 1892. The flat wage of $2.25 a day was in force from that year until 1903.

Some of the oldest men in the service, Mr. Nesdale stated, had received $2.50 driving a horse car some 30 years ago and are now getting but $2.60 a day running electric cars.

Speaking of pensions Mr. Nesdale declared that actual conditions did not work out so easily as the circulars stating the intentions of the company would lead the men to suppose. He knew of a man who had eight stripes in his division, signalizing 40 years' service, that had been able to have the benefit of the pension for but two years and another that had enjoyed such for but a month after being pensioned.

Instructions to the instructing conductors, motormen and trainmen on the surface and elevated divisions of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, specifying the points to be impressed upon the men under their charge were read in detail by Mr. Nesdale.

James J. Storrow, chairman, James L. Richards and James H. Vahey, constituting the special board of arbitration interrupted John P. Feeney, counsel for the carmen on several matters included in the testimony as to report cards for defects in cars and mishaps.

Mr. Nesdale corrected former testimony which he had made last week as to the daily business of a conductor. Instead of $25 to $27 being the usual amount of cash fares taken up he said that it should be about $20. This conclusion had been reached after a canvass of a number of the men in the different divisions.

Copies of instructions that were issued to the men and bulletins posted in the lobbies were filed as exhibits. Mr. Nesdale was not sure as to whether a professor of elocution had been employed by the company to teach the men how to properly call the names of stopping places to the passengers. He stated, however, that inspectors were detailed to take the men in vacant cars and have them practise the calling and pronunciation of names.

Among the instructions in the bulletins were the following: "Speak to the one farthest away; speak kindly and politely; speaking with decision from the front or tip of the tongue; be sure and give all syllables in a word distinctly and accent correctly; use the rising inflection, as for example, 'North station'? Don't make announcements explosively, putting all the force on the first part and none on the last; find the natural key to your voice and speak freely and in noise increase the breath and roundness of tone; do not allow tone to become hard; study yourself how you can speak more easily and pleasantly and always face the person spoken to; don't call the name of street to passengers in car and at the same time be looking away from them."

MR. BISCOE SEES GOOD PROSPECTS FOR THIS PORT

Head of Boston & Albany Road Looks for Great Trade Activity on Railroad-Steamship Terminal and Commerce Increase

EFFORT TO CONTINUE

Several appointments were made today by Howard M. Biscoe, the new vice-president of the New York Central who took charge of the Boston & Albany to succeed James H. Hustis, now vice-president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. The office of traffic manager formerly held by Mr. Biscoe was abolished.

E. P. Gardiner of Winthrop was made assistant general freight agent in Boston and H. A. Davis appointed commercial agent here. Mr. Davis was succeeded as commercial agent at Providence by W. C. Schmidt, who was formerly traveling freight agent at New Haven.

The outlook for an increased development of the port of Boston is very encouraging, in the estimation of Mr. Biscoe, who stated today that the Boston & Albany road, which had always made every effort to obtain business for the port, would continue to bid strongly for a greater import and export trade.

Mr. Biscoe pointed to expenditure of $6,000,000 by the road for a modern railroad-steamship terminal at East Boston as evidence that it had every confidence in the future growth of the port and was prepared to do all in its power to enlarge its commerce. He mentioned especially the inauguration of the North German Lloyd steamship service between Boston and Europe as a great factor in future advancement and stated that arrangements had been completed within the past two weeks for accommodation for that service at the Boston & Albany docks, East Boston.

He said that the equipment of this line, which he regarded as one of the great transatlantic steamship companies, would give Boston a better commercial service this winter than it has had for a long while. Mr. Biscoe also mentioned the service of the Navigazione Generale Italiana, as another line docking at the Boston & Albany terminal that is to increase its service at this port. The advancement of commerce at this port within the past year, he said, has been greater than in the four or five years preceding.

As to the deficit with which the Boston & Albany ended the past year, Mr. Biscoe said that he not only expected to decrease it but to eliminate it entirely. In relation to the general public demand for all-steel equipment on the railroads, he said that he believed the Boston & Albany has more rolling stock of that type than any other road in New England and that it would add to its present quota.

HOME-SEEKERS FLOCK TO NEW FARMING LANDS

Commercial Organizations in Montana Open Tents to Accommodate New Settlers

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Commercial organizations of Glasgow, Havre and Great Falls, Mont., points of registration for the Ft. Peck Indian land opening, in order to house and feed the immense horde of home-seekers have been forced to erect tent cities in their outlying districts, which hold almost as large a population as the cities themselves.

President Wilson's proclamation throwing open this tract of 1,345,000 acres of rich farming land to white settlement has started a rush of eager home-seekers to northern Montana which is expected to break all registration records for government land openings in the Northwest, Great Northern officials estimate that the registration will exceed the 100,000 mark.

While the Ft. Peck land has been appraised by the government at from $2.50 to $7 per acre, land along the Plentywood branch of the Great Northern railway, which parallels the reservation on the east ranges in value from $20 to $30 per acre, while land north of Glasgow and west of the reservation ranges from $15 to $25.

DAVID I. WALSH IN CAMPAIGN FOR GOVERNOR

Lieutenant-Governor Opens Headquarters — Democrats Await His Platform—Progressives Gain Recognition

MR. FOSS STILL WAITS

Lieut.-Gov. David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for Governor, opens campaign headquarters in the Tremont building today and Democrats throughout the state are awaiting announcement of his platform.

Although Mr. Walsh has made speeches at several outings held by Democratic organizations in the last two weeks, he has said little that would indicate his platform. He has, however, declared he is in accord with Democratic national policies.

Charles S. Bird's campaign committee is pleased over the success of the Progressive party in obtaining the appointment of Progressives as election officers this fall in many cities and towns in the state, the latest municipality to recognize the new party being Cambridge. Mayor J. Edward Barry has agreed that in each precinct of the city there shall be one Progressive inspector and one Progressive deputy inspector.

Charles S. Bird, candidate for the Progressive nomination for Governor, returned to Boston today and said he would take up at once the burden of proving his assertion that Washington Republicans chose Mr. Gardner to run as candidate for the Republican nomination. Mr. Gardner has challenged Mr. Bird to prove this.

Governor Foss is visiting in Worcester and Athol today.

No active campaigning will be done by Congressman A. P. Gardner, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, until the last of the week although his campaign managers and their corps of assistants will be busy. Mr. Gardner is back in Maine today working in the third district campaign there.

The Gardner managers announce that the congressman will make an automobile tour of the state prior to the primaries on Sept. 23. This follows a similar announcement on the part of Charles S. Bird, who proposes to speak in every city and town in the commonwealth. But Mr. Bird will defer his trip until the last of October.

Speaker Grafton D. Cushing, chairman of the Gardner executive committee, announces that Mr. Gardner will have no paid workers and that there will be no appropriation for expenses.

"This is a volunteer movement," says Mr. Cushing, "and we must count on the enthusiasm of the men who believe that the Republican party, under the leadership of Mr. Gardner, will regain its former strength."

Announcements concerning further campaign plans of Col. Everett C. Benton, Mr. Gardner's rival for the Republican nomination, are expected to be made today from his headquarters.

Governor Foss, who has said he would be an independent candidate for Governor, is the only one of the principals in the gubernatorial situation who is not exhibiting evidence of campaign activity today.

The Ward 10 Republican Club of Boston is to hold its annual outing at Squantum Saturday, Sept. 6.

The dinner will be preceded by a ball game, the winner to be awarded a silver cup donated by Malcolm E. Nichols, candidate for the Senate.

Congressman Gardner and Colonel Benton have both expressed their intention of being present.

CONTRACT FOR STATION POWER PLANT IS LET

Building to Cost $180,000 Will Be Connected With Union Depot in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY—The Star says: The last big contract in direct connection with the new Union station has been let. It calls for the erection of a station power house to cost $180,000, not including machinery and equipment. The contract was let to the Fogel Construction Company, which built the terminal company's new warehouse at Twentieth and Oak streets and the Armourdale roundhouse.

The station power plant will be at the west end of the station express building and just west of the terminal warehouse on Broadway. It will be 3½ blocks from the new station. The building will be 93 by 196 feet, about three stories high and of steel frame with reenforced concrete floors and brick walls.

The power plant will supply heat, light, power and air to the new station, and to the proposed roundhouse and coach yards on Southwest boulevard. It will be connected directly with the station by a long tunnel that runs underneath the express building. Through this building electric wires, steam, water and air pipes will run. The power plant will cool the station in summer as well as heat it in winter.

GERMANS HAVE ACTED

(Special to the Monitor)

BUENOS AIRES, A. R.—With the foreign relations of the Argentine Republic claiming increased attention the reading public of the capital is keener than ever for such news from afar as may be considered authentic.

It is a well known fact that leading newspapers of South America are particularly anxious to furnish their readers with reliable information from Europe. For some reason, news from the United States is not generally of a kind to bring before South Americans the great economic, developing features characteristic of the northern nation. Rather has it been some startling happening, perhaps some intense political embroilment, which has been considered acceptable news-matter from North America.

In the case of Europe, however, the situation stands reversed. Here in Buenos Aires, with its considerable German population, such papers as La Nacion cater to a taste that wants only the best kind of foreign news. The United States should take a lesson from what has recently been done by La Nacion in that direction. This journal has engaged Arthur Ernest von Huhn, editor of the Koelnische Zeitung, to be its chief correspondent at Berlin.

The influence of La Nacion reaches from the northern border of the republic to Tierra del Fuego in the farthest south. And now that this paper can serve its readers with matter prepared by a newspaper man regarded as a leading exponent of modern German journalism, the combination is self-evident. The Koelnische Zeitung naturally needs no introduction to those who keep themselves posted on European happenings.

In introducing von Huhn to its readers, La Nacion speaks of this German journalist's military career, his correspondence while war correspondent of the Koelnische Zeitung in the conflict between Turkey and Russia in 1877, his literary achievements and—what is considered most important of all—his reliability. As near as can be judged from surface condition these qualities in the journalist are brought out in the correspondence he is now forwarding. Von Huhn discusses such matters as the relationship between Germany and England, the questions before the Reichstag, how the American oil trust is likely to affect Europe as well as South America, and much else. It is the expression in many quarters that as soon as more North American interests center directly in Argentina and more people from the United States come here, efforts will be forthcoming to establish a more perfect news service between Buenos Aires and the nation in the north.

COSTA RICA HAS BECOME RICH FROM BIG BANANA PLANTATIONS

(Special to the Monitor)

PORT LIMON, Costa Rica—Were Costa Ricans to select a national flower to symbolize their progress along agricultural lines the banana bloom could easily lead the van in point of importance. Banana culture has made Costa Rica rich as no other Central American nation has grown rich during the past few decades. A stranger arriving at Limon soon becomes convinced that in the republic fertility of soil and enterprise combine in producing a result that means money all around.

It may be taken for granted that in view of the present tariff discussion in the United States, and with the banana occupying a somewhat central position in that discussion, Costa Ricans are anxious to know what the American Congress proposes to do in regard to the duty question. There is little that the people here would like better, of course, than that the native product should be allowed to enter the United States free of any custom tax.

With revolutions a thing of the past, education of the masses advancing in orderly fashion, business increasing, both as regards exports and imports, Costa Rica looks forward to a period of unabated prosperity. The latest figures available place the foreign trade at about $18,000,000. There is no other Central American port with better, or even as good, steamship connection with Europe or the United States.

Divided into seven provinces—San Jose, Cartago, Heredia, Alajuela, Guanacasta, Punta Arenas and Limon—the country has developed in both the agricultural districts and the mountain districts and the mountain territories. The biggest increase has been in the province of Limon, where in 1888 the inhabitants numbered no more than 1770. The latest official returns put the population at 18,195, 60 per cent of whom are negroes.

The banana tree appears in its true luxuriousness in Costa Rica. As an industry, its cultivation gives no better account of itself anywhere between Mexico in the north and Panama to the south.

MEXICANS THANKFUL NECAXA PLANT IS FREE FROM REBELS

(Special to the Monitor)

MEXICO CITY, Mex.—If there is one thing more than another that the people of the capital are thankful for in these times of political disturbance it is that up to the present there has been practically no interference with the work on the Necaxa power plant, located a little more than a hundred miles from the city of Mexico.

From the waterfalls in the Necaxa canon this city obtains the electric power that makes the lights and moves its street cars. Recent additions to the Necaxa plant give it a total of 148,900 horsepower. Very nearly $80,000,000 has been expended on a piece of construction that Colonel Goethals, the chief engineer of the Panama canal, has pronounced the most surprising engineering feat he ever has seen.

It is not to be wondered that the people of this city feel thankful the power plant has been little interfered with. That the revolutionists consider the plant a prize worth capturing is evident from the unsuccessful attempt, some time ago, to gain possession of the works. Control of the plant and the transmission line by its enemies would seriously handicap the government.

During the past three years about 6000 men have been continuously at work on the Necaxa construction. More than 100 streams were diverted from their normal courses to furnish water for the immense reservoirs, the latest of which has a capacity of more than 6,000,000 cubic feet of water. Sixteen hundred feet below the reservoir table land is the main power house, which can be reached only by an aerial hoist.

Besides furnishing electric power for the city of Mexico, much current is transmitted to the mines in El Oro, a distance of 172 miles. It was only a few months before he stepped from the presidency that Porfirio Diaz went down in the cage to see the wonderful plant in operation.

URUGUAY TO HAVE NEW REPAIR SHOPS

(Special to the Monitor)

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay—To facilitate port construction the government has purchased the stone quarries at La Teja, near Cerro, with all machinery, electric power house, etc.

The area covers 66 acres. The purchase price is $206,800. The purpose is to locate the repair shops for the smaller government-owned vessels at La Teja.

CUBAN SUGAR SHOWS INCREASE

(Special to the Monitor)

HAVANA, Cuba—The total production of sugar for the year, up to June 1, amounts to 2,066,845 long tons as compared with 1,662,789 tons during the corresponding period a year ago. All planters who can afford it are holding their supplies for higher prices.

GENERAL REYES SEES CANAL ZONE

(Special to the Monitor)

PANAMA—One of the most interested visitors to the Canal Zone since it began to attract tourists in large numbers was Gen. Rafael Reyes, former President of Colombia, who arrived direct from Santiago, Chile.

As has been stated at various times, General Reyes is on a tour of the Spanish-speaking countries to strengthen the ties between these nations.

GENERAL HUERTA MAY TRY RACE ON PEACE PLATFORM

His Foreign Minister Announces That to Be the Only Candidacy He Is Willing to Make

(Special to the Monitor)

MEXICO CITY, Mex.—What are considered most important official utterances in view of the presence here of Mr. Lind and the negotiations pending with Washington have just been given out by the minister of foreign affairs and the minister of war.

The former, Don Frederico Gamboa, said in part, "Peace is the only candidacy: General Huerta will make that and for this reason nobody can cause his overthrow," words which went around like wildfire and made a considerable stir.

It is said that President Huerta is ready to give out a statement in the form of answers to a list of questions submitted to him, through his secretary Lieutenant Cotral as to his intentions in regard to running for the presidency at the coming elections.

One of the questions asked is whether he will step down and hand the presidency over to Don Federico Gamboa, minister of foreign affairs, or Dr. Urrutia, minister of the interior, in case he intended running for the presidency. In this connection the other utterance by the minister of war is regarded as highly significant also.

General Aureliano Blanquet asserted that he himself would under no circumstances be a candidate for the presidency but that his candidate is General Huerta the only man capable of bringing about peace, in his opinion.

General Blanquet wound up by saying that his own efforts are entirely identified with the person of General Huerta and that his sole ambition is to save the army and work for the tranquillity and integrity of the country.

With a population of 1,500,000, Buenos Aires now finds itself confronted with problems such as concern rapidly growing world-cities. Conditions that are the result of a steadily increasing immigration clamor for adjustment in the Argentine capital. Where so many nationalities meet as in Buenos Aires, with the purpose of establishing new homes, the task of bringing the various elements into harmony is not easy. That the leading newspapers are lending their efforts toward the solution of the economic and social questions of the nation speaks highly for Argentine journalism.

South American newspapers generally give much space to transatlantic happenings. Realizing the ties that bind to their home countries the tens of thousands that annually find their way to Argentina, the Buenos Aires press has been especially solicitous as to its news from Germany. Germans are not in the majority among the foreign elements in the capital, but their influence, politically as well as commercially, is considerable. Trustworthy, wholesome news, whether from within the country itself or from without, should be a factor in Argentina's progress.

In Central America, Costa Rica stands out among its fellow nations as an example worthy of close study. Incidentally, what this country is doing with banana cultivation could be duplicated in other Central American territories. The nations situated between Mexico to the north and Panama to the south, primarily need permanent, good order. In Costa Rica, as in Salvador, prosperity reigns because the countries are at peace. A similar pacific state of affairs should stand to the credit of other Central American peoples. Less political agitation and a steadier development of the soil will point the way to good government and contentment of the masses.

DOMINICAN PRESIDENT VOICES HIS FAITH IN UNITED STATES

(Special to the Monitor)

SAN DOMINGO, Dominican Republic—The appointment of Walker W. Vick as receiver of customs in succession to W. E. Pulliam at first did not entirely satisfy the many who had come to look upon Mr. Pulliam as a Dominican fixture. There was no disapproval of the choice of the United States as it concerned Mr. Vick personally. Only, the work of his predecessor had been so eminently gratifying that officials and citizens generally had come to appreciate Mr. Pulliam's service to the extent that the American government was asked not to accept his resignation.

Collections at Dominican custom houses during the past fiscal year broke all records since the convention with the United States was entered into, six years ago. The amount collected was $4,100,000; the returns for January alone $405,000. The new collector will find the government ready to give him its confidence, and continued progress is anticipated in a department that formerly proved one of the most annoying features of administrative work as the custom houses were exposed to revolutionary attacks before United States protection took effect.

Provisionad President Jose B. Valez recently took occasion to express his complete confidence in anything the American government deemed it necessary to do in the premises, even while the convention reads that nothing shall be done without the consent of both nations.

TRADE NOTES

(Special to the Monitor)

LA GUAIRA, Venezuela—The President of the republic has decreed that the federal telegraph system be extended to Turemero from El Callao.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras—Work has begun on the railroad to connect Truxillo and Juticalpa, in the department of Olancho.

LA PAZ, Bolivia—About 93 per cent of Bolivia's tin production is exported to England.

CARACAS, Venezuela—The registration of a foreign trade mark in Venezuela may be effected through a local agent holding a special power of attorney from the applicant.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay—Exports of livestock on the hoof to Argentina and Brazil are given at about 100,000 cattle and 200,000 sheep a year.

LA PAZ, Bolivia—Traveling salesmen in this country are obliged to pay taxes, the amount varying in the different cities.

LIMA, Peru—Among the changes in the custom duties here is a charge of one half cent per month on goods warehoused in the ports of Paita, Callao and Mollendo.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil—The foreign commerce of Brazil in 1912 amounted to more than $690,000,000. Compared with 1911 this is an increase of $9,206,935. Rubber exports totalled $80,475,125.

SANTIAGO, Chile—The government recently has requested bids on 110 locomotives, 847 cars and eight automotors.

SANTIAGO, Chile—A consulting commercial commission has been established by the department of foreign relations to study and report on commercial treaties made by Chile with foreign nations.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic—The commercial school recently established in this city provides for instruction in ordinary correspondence as well as in some industrial pursuits.

PORTOVIEJO, Ecuador—A weekly newspaper, El Obrero, has been established here. As its name implies, it will devote itself to the interests of the working classes.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico—The government has authorized Jesus de la Garza Campos to engage in the whaling and fishing industry in the gulf of Cortes for a period of 10 years. Use of explosives has been forbidden.

GUATEMALA CITY—The municipal revenues of the republic of Guatemala amounted to $266,000 in 1912. The government claims a saving of about $20,000 by doing its own printing instead of letting it to private concerns.

BUENOS AIRES, A. R.—The estimated petroleum zone in the territory of Chubut extends from the banks of the Atlantic ocean to the Chico river. Some of the recent wells have turned out gushers.

LIMON, Costa Rica—Planters here are much interested in the reported experimentation at Spokane, Wash., U. S. A., where a large wholesale fruit concern is ripening bananas successfully by electricity.

GENERAL HUERTA'S CABINET PLEASES

(Special to the Monitor)

MEXICO CITY, Mex.—General satisfaction is expressed here with the recent appointments by General Huerta to various ministerial posts.

Aside from Don Federico Gamboa, who was appointed minister of foreign affairs, there are Lic. Jose Maria Lozano, appointed minister of public instruction; Lic. Manuel Garza Aldape, who after swearing in Senor Gamboa, was by the latter sworn in as minister of Fomento, and Lic. Senator Enrique Gorostieta, appointed finance minister.

BRAZIL'S PRESIDENTIAL RACE REMAINS UNCERTAIN AS EVER

Press Predictions Run Gamut of Speculation, While Not a Few of the Numerous Candidates Are Said to Be Seeking Their Own Rather Than State's Good

(Special to the Monitor)

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil—The political situation has reached a stage where every one apparently claims to see what is going to happen at the next presidential election but where no one cares to commit himself unreservedly. The newspapers indugle in all manner of predictions.

In the most influential circles the passing of the former president of the republic, Dr. Manuel Ferraz de Campos Salles, at the present time when his wise counsel is very much to be desired, is looked upon as a national loss, for Campos Salles belonged that group of Brazilian statesmen whose political activities stand in strong contrast to the lesser politicians that look to their own interests rather than the good of the entire nation.

The friends of Campos Salles, as well as his political opponents, combine in paying him marked respect. All Brazil realizes the invaluable service of this one-time president, who has, perhaps, done more than any other man to strengthen the ties between the nation and its neighbor, Argentina. The official visit that, as president, he paid to the president of Argentina, in 1900, held the attention of the world at the time because it went to prove that these nations proposed to be first among the enlightened South American countries, and to that end wanted the closest possible relations between their peoples.

A native of Sao Paulo, Campos Salles early identified himself with the reform party. A lawyer by profession, he soon reached a commanding position. Elected a deputy in the national assembly he held the confidence of the people. One of the marked events in the career of Campos Salles was his selection as ambassador to Argentina; General Roca, the former President of Argentina, occupying the similar office as ambassador at the Brazilian capital.

As Campos Salles was considered a possible candidate for the presidency, his absence from the list may cause a recasting. Probably the most popular Brazilian for the post of chief executive is Dr. Lauro Muller, whose return from the United States was made the occasion for most remarkable demonstrations. As matters stand now candidates less conspicuous on the whole are making renewed efforts to gain popular approval.

BUENOS AIRES HAS CHICAGO EXHIBITS

(Special to the Monitor)

BUENOS, AIRES, A. R.—The exposition of manufactured articles established in Calle Belgrano, this city, early in July, by the Chicago Association of Commerce, is attracting the attention of many Argentine importers. Products ranging from elevators to canned goods are on exhibition.

As a method for bringing American goods to the attention of the South American buyers, this move on the part of the Chicago exporters points the way, affirm importers here.

HAVANA PREPARES FOR GOOD SEASON

(Special to the Monitor)

HAVANA, Cuba—A rush out of the ordinary is expected to this place and adjacent sections and islands when the real southward-travel season sets in.

Few visitors to the Panama canal fail to stop off here, and preparations are under way to accommodate a record crowd. The steamship companies have been unusually active in providing accommodations for those desiring to visit the Antilles this year, and the hotels are making ready to receive the visitors in unusual style.

Real Estate Market ✺ T Wharf Activities ✺ Sailings

Locally, the real estate business being done doesn't amount to much, and those most deeply interested are not sorry, on account of the general relaxation and continued enjoyment of the vacation season, believing it is far better to take a good rest before entering upon another campaign of activity, should the records of 1912 be repeated. The volume of last week appears to be so far below 1912 and 1911 of the corresponding period that comparisons are hardly worth while.

The files of the real estate exchange show the following entries of record at the Suffolk registry of deeds for the week ending Aug. 30, 1913:

AUGUST REAL ESTATE SUMMARY

Although the number of transfers and number of mortgages during the month of August, 1913, fell away below the statistics of 1912 and 1911, the volume of money appropriated to finance the deals appear to be on an average par with those periods, and conditions continue to be normal and practically approved by brokers and investors.

The files of the Real Estate Exchange show the following entries of record at the Suffolk registry of deeds for the month of August, 1913:

ALLSTON AND BROOKLINE

W. Stanley Tripp has purchased through the office of W. J. McDonald, 95 Milk street, the six apartment brick building numbered 1292 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, owned by Bernard Steuer. The assessed valuation is $31,000 including $5000 on the $5500 square feet of land.

In this connection Mr. Steuer takes title through W. J. McDonald's office from W. Stanley Tripp, to the C. Granville Way homestead, corner of St. Paul street and Longwood avenue, Brookline, containing 17,500 square feet of land carrying an assessed valuation of $15,000, total assessment being $33,500. It is the purchaser's intention to raze the old homestead and erect four modern brick apartments on the premises from plans by J. N. Proctor.

ROXBURY TRANSACTIONS

An important deal of more than usual interest has just been consummated in Roxbury, whereby Louis H. Epstein et al. become owners of three 3-story brick apartment houses numbered 15 to 25 Munroe street, just off Warren street. They are taxed in the name of Mary Abrams for $46,900, and $10,900 of this amount applies to 17,960 square feet of land.

Harry S. Swartz takes title from Nellie Bergman to the frame dwelling and 3535 square feet of land situated 86 Harrishof street, near Humboldt avenue; $5300 is assessed on the improvements and an additional $1400 on the land.

Bertha C. Hart has placed a deed on record to the frame dwelling house and lot numbered 95A Moreland street, near Perrin street, which adjoins her own property. The lot contains 2852 square feet and is valued at $1400. Total assessment $2400. Grace B. McIntire conveyed title.

BRIGHTON AND NORTH END

Property consisting of a frame dwelling house and lot containing 4067 square feet has changed owners, located 33-35 Etna street corner of Spring street, Brighton. William A. Leary sold to Hannah Fahey. Total assessment $4600. Land value $800.

The North End parcel is located 3 Stillman place between Stillman street and Cooper street. It is a four-story brick house and lot of ground containing 830 square feet. The property was purchased by Enrico Cassassa and wife from John Lavezzolo.

COLORADO MINERAL PALACE EXPLOITS SILVER STATE IN PUEBLO CITY PARK

Imposing Structure Sheltering Mythical Rulers Shows How Base and Precious Metals Are Won and Refined

EXHIBITS ELABORATE

Silver Queen and King Coal statues are 23 feet high

Exterior of Mineral palace, Pueblo, Colo., now owned by city

PUEBLO, Colo.—The Colorado Mineral palace, surrounded by a pretty 40-acre park, contains the finest collection of minerals in the state. It is situated in Pueblo, a city more widely appreciated as to character under its frequent metaphorical styling of "the Pittsburgh of the West." Pueblo, as its name implies, is a settlement of Indian foundation, but the year 1854 is made the beginning of its history as a city. A gateway of the mountains and plains, Pueblo is appropriately situated for the palace of the minerals which shows the wealth dug from Colorado's mountains and indicates the treasures still to be had for the seeking.

The building, rectangular in shape, has four odd corner columns each capped by a globe 25 feet in diameter, showing the map of the world.

On the interior wonders open up in a rather unusual way and grow as one wanders about. Twenty-two columns support the structure, the lower part of which serve as cases for the minerals. In addition to these the entire wall is lined with cases to a convenient height. Minerals from each county are placed by themselves, each specimen marked with the value, the kind of ore and the mine from which it comes. Almost every county in the state is represented and the character of the exhibits are of this sort: Ouray and Mineral counties show silver ore; Lake county, iron, gold, silver and zinc; Las Animas, coal; Eagle, lead, zinc and marble; Summit, silver; Clear Creek, lead, zinc, silver and gold; San Juan, silver; Fremont, marble and coal; Gilpin, silver and lead.

The main floor of the building is an unbroken area of about 100 by 150 feet and is used for a great many public gatherings.

The ceiling quickly attracts the eye. In the center is a huge dome, forming a complete hemisphere, 100 feet in diameter, and on its rim smaller ones. Around these, occupying the entire ceiling, are 22 others, each about 20 feet in diameter. Paintings of Colorado's wild flowers by an Italian artist decorate the domes.

A representation in relief work of the Ben Butler mine gives a beholder an illustration of the extent of the work to be done when undertaking to operate a mine. In a small space are shown comprehensively the mountains, the shaft house, the tramways and mills.

On the floor of the hall, the reigning powers of the domain are represented. The Silver Queen, who came to the throne from Aspen, Summit county, is seen pouring the silver from her horn of plenty and at her left is King Coal, who hails from Trinidad, the home of the largest coal mines. Each figure, seated, measures 23 feet from the floor of the throne.

A pipe organ built at the Pueblo smelter entirely of products manufactured in Pueblo is another attractive object. The pipes are of lead and copper, the keys of copper and lead from the Kokomo district and the stops of iron.

When in operation, the stage is perhaps the most interesting feature. The setting represents rugged mountains with projecting rocks and steep inclines and there is a real waterfall, 20 feet high, at the back. A tunnel, opened to view so as to reveal the operations, shows a miniature railroad with ore cars drawn by a sturdy little burro. It is to be said, however, that the burro in the operated mine is replaced now with more active and modern appliances.

Built originally in 1884 to boom a section of real estate in the northern part of the city which was still prairie, the palace is now in the midst of what is, perhaps, the most popular residence district. When the city came to feel the need of a new and larger park, the ground surrounding the building was bought for the purpose, and the city became at the same time the owner of the Mineral palace. Since the Mineral Palace park is now serving as a public playground, the building with its exhibits is more often seen and appreciated. The exhibits have been added to until all the present available space seems occupied.

Leaving the building there is still one specimen of interest, especially to the Rocky mountaineer, as a reminder that not so many years ago in this state the buffalo roamed and man had not arrived to rearrange nature's work; to the tenderfoot, as a hint that the westerner is becoming civilized and that the finding of the Indians in paint and feathers is no more to be expected. It is a slab of large cottonwood tree bearing an inscription to this effect:

"THE OLD MONARCH,
Age 380 years,
Circumference, 28 feet,
Height, 88 feet.

"Was cut down in South Pueblo June 25, 1883, at the cost of $250. Known throughout Colorado as the oldest landmark in the state. During the Pike's peak excitement, the old tree sheltered many a weary traveler. In 1850, there were 36 persons massacred by the Indians while camping near this tree. Wild Bill, Buffalo Bill and other noted Indian scouts have built their camp fires under this tree."

Those who attended the world's exposition in Chicago had an opportunity to see the Colorado mineral palace in miniature, where there was exhibited a replica, the work of which was done by Charles Otero, a pioneer of Colorado, and for many years a manufacturing jeweler of Pueblo. It was made of precious metals and jewels, with the roof adjustable so the interior could be seen, and completely lighted within and without by electricity.

PRESIDENT IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH MEXICO

Attitude of Officials Seems to Be Hopeful of Developments — Mr. Lind Still in Veracruz

WASHINGTON — President Wilson is to return here on Wednesday from his week-end holiday at Cornish, N. H. During his stay at his summer home he has been in close touch with the Mexican situation through the department of state and John Lind, the President's personal representative in Veracruz.

Mr. Lind still remains in Veracruz so far as state department officials know. Word which he has sent to the President and the department has been reassuring. That this is so is apparent from the attitude of these officials, who appear to be content to wait for expected hopeful developments.

The administration, it was said, was encouraged by statements from Mexico City which give strong indication that the Mexican authorities do not regard negotiations with the United States at an end and that they are expecting to hear further from the American confidential agent.

While the President went to Cornish for the holiday and week end he has had an opportunity for quiet study of several problems which have been pressing him while he was absorbed in the Mexican situation. The nature of these, however, has not been disclosed.

PEACE ARCHES ARE PROPOSED

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont.—Plans for the celebration of 100 years of peace between the United States and Great Britain by the Canadian government were outlined by Sir Edmund Walker, chairman of the Canadian section of the peace commission recently, according to the Montreal Star.

He said it was proposed to erect a permanent memorial, in the form of an archway, at every highway crossing the border from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and also a magnificent memorial bridge across the Niagara river.

DEDHAM CLUB IN CANOES

DEDHAM, Mass.—Several hundred persons witnessed the regatta held yesterday on the Charles river under the auspices of the Dedham Canoe Club. The club made its debut for the first time since it organized several weeks ago. Throughout the day the river was crowded with canoeists watching the events. Some clever racing was provided.

FIVE-CENT FARE EXTENDED

The Bay State street railway has extended the five-cent fare limit to and from Boston via Chelsea on the Melrose Highlands division from Goodyear avenue to Sylvan street.

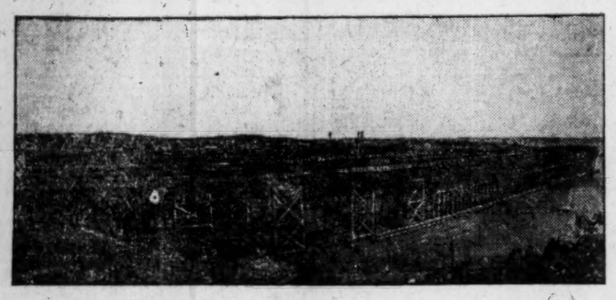

PUBLIC BUILDINGS OF TODAY IN BUSY AMERICAN TOWNS

Van Buren county court house, Paw Paw, Mich.

PAW PAW, Mich.—Paw Paw, the county seat of Van Buren county, Michigan, is located on the Kalamazoo, Lake Shore & Chicago railway in the Michigan fruit belt, and is a busy shipping point for grapes, peaches, apples, potatoes and all kinds of grain. It has one of the finest school houses and grounds in the state. It has a water works system and electric lights. The shores of Maple lake, within the corporate limits of the village, are lined with cottages and permanent homes. Acres and acres of vineyards are within a few miles of Paw Paw and there are shipped from 700 to 1000 carloads of grapes annually out of the village. A large tonnage of grapes is also made into grape juice here.

ORE DOCKS, TWO HARBORS, MINN.

TWO HARBORS, Minn.—Upon this city, situated on the north shore of Lake Superior, this peculiar name was bestowed on account of its two natural harbors.

From one of these harbors more than 60,000 tons of iron ore are shipped daily; also a great deal of lumber and pulp wood. This harbor contains six large iron ore docks, two of which are constructed of steel and concrete; three coal docks, one lumber dock, a pulp wood dock and a passenger pier.

Two Harbors is the shipping port for the Vermilion Range, one of the richest iron ore districts in the world. Trains arrive every few minutes, bringing the ore, which is deposited in "pockets" of the docks. From these pockets it is conveyed to the hatches of the boats by means of chutes. In a very few hours one of these ore boats can be loaded with 12,000 tons or more of iron ore. Usually boats bring return cargoes of coal from the lower lake ports.

In addition to its shipping activities the town and its surrounding country possesses special scenic beauties. There are splendid trout streams near by and many small lakes.

RATIONAL GOLF

By STEVEN ARMSTRONG

Last week we gave an article dealing with golf in France so it is only fair to deal with the progress of the game in Germany for a change. A series of articles have been coming out in Golf Illustrated about it and we are informed that a beautiful cup for the open amateur championship of Germany was presented this year. The trophy is a two-handled cup made after a model belonging to the St. Albans Corporation. It is of the form which was evolved from the porringer-shaped cups of the seventeenth century, and became common in the first half of the eighteenth century. On the upper part is engraved: "Deutscher Golf Verbanel, Amateur-Meisterskaft von Deutschland, Wanderpreis, Gestiftet 1913."

Fred Manning writes that the step taken by the German Golf Association at their last general meeting to create an amateur championship of Germany open to all comers, and to hold the first meeting at Oberhof, in the Thuringian mountains, will no doubt help to further the interests of the game in Germany very considerably. Not only that; it will also draw the foreigners' attention to the game in the fatherland, where golf is played with great zeal and zest, if not all over the country yet, but anyhow in most of the leading cities and watering places.

Strange to say, Berlin, with its 3,500,000 inhabitants, has only one club, the Berlin Golf Club, which was founded in 1899 by a handful of foreigners (principally Englishmen), and is the oldest golf club in existence in the country. Its name is to be changed into Golf Club, Berlin, and there is every chance of the club and all moving away from its present location at Charlottenburg-Westend further away into the country, an entirely new scheme having been worked out and put before the committee of the club. I am not in a position to give further particulars yet, but as an extraordinary general meeting has been called for the purpose of dealing with this matter, I shall before long be able to say something more about it.

In Hamburg golf has also been flourishing for several years back. Here there are two clubs—the Hamburger Golf Club at Flottbek and the Golf Club Wentorf Reinbek at Reinbek, the latter an 18-hole course. The majority of Germany's best players will be found in these two clubs, now counting the local English members, of course, and the lady players, whose style of play is remarkably good.

To come back to the open amateur championship, which was held under the auspices of this club, beginning on Aug. 8, a few particulars concerning the conditions under which this event took place may be of interest.

The championship was open to members of all German clubs affiliated to the association and to members of all recognized foreign clubs who are amateurs and have belonged to their respective clubs for three months up to the day the entries closed. A certificate was required to this effect by all members of non-German clubs who wished to compete.

In the preliminary rounds the competition was played by holes, each game consisting of one round of 18 holes, the final heat being played over 36 holes in accordance with the St. Andrews rules and the rules of the Herzoglicher Golf Club, Oberhof.

The entrance fee was 20 marks for each person, and entries (accompanied by the fee) had to be sent in in writing by July 29 to Dr. Gustav Sieveking, honorable secretary of the association, at the above-mentioned Hamburg address.

BANK MEN TO GIVE VIEWS ON CURRENCY BILL

Experts of Opposite Opinion on Reform Leading Witnesses Invited to First Public Hearing on Glass-Owen Measure

OPPOSITION DECRIED

WASHINGTON—Expert opinion and public criticism of the administration currency bill are due for expression at the Senate banking and currency committee hearing today. This is now invited for the first time when prominent bankers, experts and business men will appear by invitation to give their views of the proposed legislation, and offer changes.

Repeated charges that the opinions of financial experts have not been fully considered in the framing of the new bill have been partly responsible for the opening of public hearings by Chairman Owen of the Senate committee. Senator Owen made public a letter deploring what he terms "artificial propaganda" against the bill.

J. B. Forgan, of the First National Bank of Chicago, and George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of the same city, expected as leading witnesses in the first day's session of the hearings, are understood to represent different views as to currency reform.

Among others invited to appear before the committee are: F. F. Swinney of Kansas City, Mo.; Samuel Untermyer of New York; Festus J. Wade of St. Louis, Mo.; Prof. Jeremiah Jenks of Cornell University; Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president of the National City Bank of New York; Logan C. Murray, president of the Louisville Board of Trade; H. A. Mohelentah, president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association; Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University; Newton D. Alling, president of the Nassau National Bank of New York; J. T. M. Johnston, of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, Mo.; W. H. Alle of New York; E. D. Hulburt, of the Merchants Loan & Trust Company of Chicago; C. V. Davis of Petersburg, Va., and John Wanamaker of Philadelphia.

PHOTOGRAPHERS OF NEW ENGLAND IN CONVENTION

Camera and Studio Experts Gather for Three-Day Sessions —Art Exhibition to Be Feature

Expert camera and studio men from the New England states meet for the fifteenth annual convention of the Photographers Association of New England in Mechanics building this afternoon, for the first of the three days' session.

The convention opens with an address of welcome, followed by committee appointments, a lecture on advertising by Juan C. Abel and a talk by W. S. Lively. Special exhibitions of home portraiture, the new field of photographers, are used as illustration in the talks. Wednesday's session will be taken up with reports of committees, talks on commercial photography and unfinished business. The art exhibition will be open Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Election of officers and the selection of the next place of meeting will take place Thursday. There also will be short talks on photography and the announcement of prize winners.

PAY-AS-YOU-LEAVE CARS ARE ADOPTED

A combination of the pay-as-you-enter and pay-as-you-leave systems is in effect in the street car service of Cleveland, O., where peculiar traffic conditions prevail, says Popular Mechanics. Cars from all sections of the city come into the downtown district to the public square and loop back, and it was for the purpose of relieving the rush-hour congestion at that point that the combination system was adopted.

BOSTON LETTER CARRIERS BAND AT WHITE HOUSE

President Wilson to Hear Local Musical Organization on Thursday

WASHINGTON—The Boston letter carriers' band will play at the White House Thursday. They will be the first musicians aside from the United States Marine band to play at the White House since President Wilson's administration began. The band arrived in Washington from Baltimore today, 30 in the party, including Leader J. J. Benkers. Today they visited the treasury, Smithsonian Institution, government printing office and the House and Senate.

Wednesday they visit the bureau of engraving and printing and make the trip to Mt. Vernon by boat. Thursday they play at the White House, will be received by Speaker Clark and visit the Congressional library. Friday they leave for Harper's Ferry and Pittsburg, en route to Chicago, where they will return the Boston visit of the Chicago letter carriers' band made two years ago.

SUFFRAGIST SAYS MILITANCY HERE IS IMPOSSIBILITY

"Militancy in the United States is impossible because of the difference in procedure," said Miss Elizabeth Freeman this morning, an American suffragist who has spent some time in England studying political and industrial conditions. Miss Freeman arrived in Boston yesterday with a party of suffragists after a 250-mile tramp from New York. "In England the question is not submitted to voters. The barrier between women and their vote is a few men in the English cabinet. The barrier between women and the vote in the United States is the total lack of understanding on the part of the general public that American women are really in earnest."

The suffrage horse which lightened the burdens of the pilgrims during the trip from New York will be sold at auction Thursday in one of the squares of the city, Miss Margaret Foley to be the auctioneer. When the party reached Boston Common yesterday about 800 persons collected to hear the speeches by the pilgrims and the representatives of the state and city associations. Among the speakers were Miss Foley, Miss Vera Wentworth, Miss Freeman and Col. Ida Craft of New York. Miss Wentworth will return to England in October to finish her college course after which she expects to come back to America to study social science in one of our universities.

INTERNATIONAL, AMERICAN AND HOME ART ENCOURAGED BY ANDERSON, IND., ORGANIZATION

Samples of work done by members of the Anderson Keramic Club

ANDERSON, Ind.—In the fall of 1911, the Art Association of Anderson was organized by a few men and women who believed that there was enough keenness for the beautiful and civic pride to make the enterprise a success. They have striven to bring before the citizens what this democratic movement means to the city and to the children who may grow up under its influence.

It is the aim of this association to purchase at least one good picture each year and to establish a permanent art collection for the city.

During the first year of its organization, a collection of 84 pictures, representative of artists of America, including Otis J. Adams, John Alexander, J. E. Bundy, William M. Chase, Colin Campbell, Elliott Daingerfield, Ben Foster, Robert W. Grafton, Birge Harrison, Childe Hassam, Sergeant Kendall, T. C. Steele and many others, and valued at $41,732, was brought to the city, Anderson being one in a circuit of 10 cities giving the exhibition. An exhibit is made annually of international artists also.

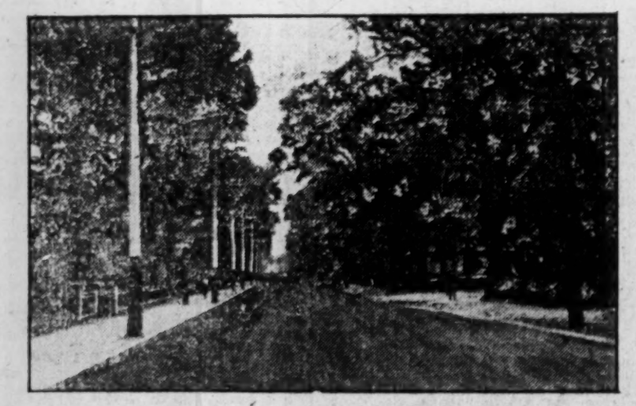

There is an exhibit given each year of the work of Indiana artists, in connection with which is given a crafts exhibit of local workers and also an exhibit of the art and craft work of the public schools. The school authorities have always cooperated with the association, and given the high school building for the exhibits, which are held for the period of two weeks. Each exhibition is given free to all, which will include also a proposed monthly or bi-monthly motion picture show during the coming year, at the high school auditorium, showing reproductions of paintings chiefly.

The Anderson Keramic Club always makes an exhibit of its work at these times. At the recent "Made in Anderson" exhibit this club gave an exhibition of its work in connection with needlework and basketry. The teacher gives a regular college course, with a text-book of design and composition (and working from a classroom point of view.

Anderson has produced three young men who are illustrators on New York papers and magazines.

Anderson was the home of the late Samuel Richards, whose paintings are quite well known, one of the best being Evangeline, owned by the art museum of Detroit. Mrs. Samuel Richards maintains her residence in Anderson and sometimes makes a loan of her husband's studies or gives occasional lectures and exhibits of her husband's works.

TRURO (N. S.) ENVIRONS PICTURESQUE

Prince street, looking east, in Truro, N. S.

TRURO, N. S.—Truro is one of the inland towns of Nova Scotia of importance as a railway center, with educational institutions of high rank, picturesque in setting and upkeep. Symmetrical streets are lined with shade trees and attractive homes are surrounded by well-kept gardens and lawns. Victoria park is near, a glen far-famed for its natural beauty. There is a system of fine public schools, with a provincial normal college and a college of agriculture located here

SPECIAL TRAINS FOR PEACH YIELD

LEWISTOWN, Pa.—The peach crop of Snyder county, estimated at 40,000 baskets, only 5000 of which have been marketed, has become so marked a feature of traffic on the Erie division of the Pennsylvania railroad as to necessitate the running of special trains, according to the Philadelphia North American.

Extra cars were used on freight and passenger trains until the delay became so great that all connections were missed at terminals.

INTERURBAN LINE TO BE IMPROVED

TACOMA, Wash.—Improvements costing $60,000 are to be made to the Tacoma-Seattle Interurban line at once, according to announcement here by General Manager Bean, of the Puget Sound Electric Company. This will include a block signal system and new roadbed. Crews have been at work on the roadbed work some time reballasting and putting in new ties, says a despatch in the Portland Oregonion.

Stock Market Irregular — London Firm

STOCKS HAVE QUICK RISE AND DECLINE

Early Trading Sees Higher Prices and Slump Causes Losses Later —Rumely Issues Conspicuously Strong Feature

NEW HAVEN SELLS OFFF

With the exception of New Haven, stocks generally were strong during the early part of today's session. Particular strength was displayed by Amalgamated Copper and Canadian Pacific.

It was difficult to tell what caused the early spurt but the fact that sentiment is now much better in business and financial circles seems to be a potent reason for advancing stocks. The professionals still dominate the market, however, for the public has not shown much interest.

Further selling of New Haven was attributed to the wreck which occurred this morning. This stock slumped sharply, reaching a new low price during the early sales. The general tone was steady at the end of the first half hour.

The local copper stocks were in good demand. The active issues advanced well during the first sales. Butte & Superior, Granby, Utah Copper and Chino were conspicuously strong.

Soon after the early rise stocks began to sell off and before midday the gains were wiped out and substantial losses occurred. Amalgamated Copper opened up 1½ at 77⅛, improved fractionally and then sold well below 77. Canadian Pacific was up 3¼ at the opening at 221¾, improved to 222⅝ and dropped to 221 during the first half of the session.

Union Pacific was ex-dividend of 2½ per cent at the opening at 152¾, compared with Friday's closing of 154⅞ and after improving to 153¼ dropped under 152. New York Central was weak. The Rumely issues were conspicuously strong. Chino had a good early advance and then sold off.

On the local exchange Butte & Superior opened up ¾ at 31¼, rose to 32½ and then declined 1½. New Haven opened off 1¼ at 92 and declined to 90½. It was fractionally below that figure in New York.

Stocks rallied moderately in the early afternoon and at the beginning of the last hour were fractionally above the lowest.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY'S BIG DISBURSEMENTS

NEW YORK—Eastman Kodak Company has declared so far this year 7½ per cent in regular dividends on the common stock and 25 per cent in extras, making a total of 32½ per cent up to date.

The company declared 30 per cent in extra dividends on the common stock in 1912, 1911 and 1910; 20 per cent in 1909, 15 per cent in 1908, 10 per cent in 1907 and 9½ per cent in 1906.

The following table gives net profits, percentage of surplus available for common dividends, and percentage paid for a number of years past:

Year ended Dec. 31	Net profits	Common Sur. earned	Common Div. pd.
1912	$13,999,047	69.81%	40%
1911	11,649,263	57.80	40
1910	8,997,177	54.01	40
1909	7,852,575	33.02	30
1908	7,472,519	31.02	25
1907	7,015,423	30.01	20
1906	5,415,700	23.03	19
1905	4,013,913	18.08	10

A big factor in the business of the Eastman Kodak Company is the rapid growth of the moving picture business. The company manufactures millions of feet of film a year.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1912, the company reported net profits of approximately $12,000,000, and it is fair to assume that earnings this year will show a substantial increase over those of last year, as the company's profits have shown an increase each year since organization.

ATCHISON

At the annual meeting of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway stockholders will be asked to ratify the lease of the Verde Valley Railway Company and Dodge City & Cimarron Valley Railway Company.

STOCKS SHOW STRENGTH IN LONDON TODAY

Canadian Pacific Makes Relatively the Best Showing and Gilt-Edge Investments Are Generally in Demand

AMERICANS HESITATE

Special Cable to the Monitor from its European Bureau

LONDON—Markets closed firm generally. Canadian rails and copper shares show big rises.

(By Boston Financial News)

LONDON — Securities with professional dealers mainly interested exhibited firmness today and gilt-edged investments hardened.

Home rails turned heavy and Midland railway descriptions became weak on the express wreck on that line.

Sentiment on American railway shares appeared cheerful but some caution was evident pending the New York reopening and the publication of your government crop report. Relatively the strongest showing of all was in Canadian Pacific on Berlin and local buying. This had a favorable sympathetic effect on Grand Trunks.

Mexicans were steady. Foreigners were quiet but confidence was felt owing to the situation in Paris. Kaffirs acted erratically on the labor troubles in the rand. Diamonds and coppers held strong.

Compared with the final figures on Friday of last week Rio Tintos at 79⅞ were 1⅛ higher. De Beers rose 1-16 to 20 13-16.

AMERICAN WOOLEN COMPANY UNDER THE NEW TARIFF

William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, returned to business this morning. In regard to the published statement that he had expressed a favorable opinion of the proposed new woolen tariff schedule, Mr. Wood said emphatically that he had not done this; that nobody could express an opinion of the measure until its exact final terms were known, and this could not be until the bill had passed the conference committee of the two houses of Congress and been signed by the President.

"All that I am willing to say now," Mr. Wood added, "is that the American Woolen Company has the best possible mechanical equipment and the best technical skill. We shall make an honest and determined effort to operate our machinery under the terms of the new tariff, whatever they may be. I believe that all American manufacturers will do likewise. If we do not succeed, it will certainly not be our fault."

OUTLOOK FOR FLAXSEED GOOD

MINNEAPOLIS—E. C. Warner, banker and president of Midland Linseed Products Company, says the flaxseed crop is still in the making by 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 bushels and that outlook for a liberal raw material supply for the oil industry grows greater with every day of favorable weather.

"Last year the government allowed Minneapolis and North and South Dakota 26,000,000 bushels about this time," Mr. Warner said, "and the three states raised 30,000,000. This year the government has allowed about 21,000,000, but it may go considerably above that.

There is considerable late flax that with a sudden drop and an early frost visitation northwest would amount to little or nothing, but will pull along into a respectable addition if favorable weather continues."

DEVELOPMENT OF REPUBLIC RAILWAY CO.

Plans of Some Magnitude to Be Worked Out for One of Important Subsidiaries Under Management of R. P. Stevens

RECENT IMPROVEMENT

In calling R. P. Stevens, until recently head of the Lehigh Valley Transit Company, to the presidency of its principal subsidiary, the Mahoning & Shenango Railway & Light Company, the Republic Railway & Light interests are placing upon him the responsibility of bringing into realization plans of magnitude relating to the district centering about Youngstown, O.

Owing to his association with other enterprises of importance, the retiring president of the Mahoning & Shenango, Norman McD. Crawford, felt that he could not give requisite time to such broad improvements and extensions as the Republic Railway & Light interests have in mind for this company. Mr. Stevens, who will assume his new office Oct. 1, has agreed to devote his entire energies to the work for a period of years.

Mr. Crawford, however, has not relinquished his office without having brought to completion improvements and extensions which, in the past year and a half alone, have required an outlay of several millions of dollars. In a general way, it may be said that plans for the next few years involve improvements to keep pace with rapidly growing business. Arrangements will be made to serve new communities and various industries and to furnish municipalities with power for local distribution. Negotiations now under way provide for taking on several thousand horsepower of larger power business.

The importance of the Mahoning & Shenango is indicated by the fact that its field, in a general way, is in and around Youngstown, which is considered by the Republic company to be the key to the entire district served by its subsidiaries. This district served is about 350 square miles in area, with a combined population estimated to be 217,000, an increase of nearly 90 per cent since 1900.

Recent improvements include a modern 18,000 kilowatt steam plant at Lowellville, O., which, with additions to capacity previously installed, makes a total generating capacity of approximately 45,000 horsepower. A sub-station was built at Hubbard, O., and various extensions to the railways, chiefly in Youngstown and in Sharon and New Castle, Pa. An additional system of new high tension transmission lines was also installed, radiating from the new power station at Lowellville and connecting it with the various stations and substations in the other parts of the system. These improvements were in addition to substantial extensions and betterments installed, largely from earnings, in 1911, among which were a new 6000 horsepower turbine unit at Youngstown and new car barns and sub-station at Niles, O.

Over 98.5 per cent of the outstanding stocks of the Mahoning & Shenango is owned by the Republic Railway & Light Company. The Mahoning & Shenango is the operating company for 19 traction companies, some of these also furnishing power for six power companies, and for one realty company.

THE GRAIN MARKET

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent:

Wheat—Fair advances were made in the wheat market today, due principally to the strength of the foreign markets over the holiday. Strength abroad was attributed to lighter offerings from the countries having a surplus to sell. Shorts covered on the prospects of a rather bullish visible. There was frost in parts of the Canadian Northwest but the Canadian wheat crop is practically safe, and it is generally believed that the damage from cold weather will be very small. At all events the northwestern markets were slow in responding to the strength at other centers. The movement of new spring wheat is showing a natural increase.

Corn—Was strong, working up nearly a cent a bushel. Private crop reports were bullish. Clement Curtis & Co. estimated the crop at 2, 335,000,000. The Oklahoma state report was for a crop of 60,000,000 bushels versus over 100,000,000 last year. Country offerings light and well taken care of. Western bulls seemed to be showing greater confidence and were credited with the buying of futures on a liberal scale. Prospects for showers in various parts of the belt induced profit taking.

Oats—Were firmer with other grain. There were 2,500,000 bushels tendered on September contracts at Chicago, but liquidation seemed to have been fairly complete. Receipts are moderate.

COPPER 16¼ CENTS

NEW YORK—The United Metal Selling Company has advanced its price for copper to 16¼ cents.

Late Financial and Industrial Conditions

MODERATE ACTIVITY NOTED IN THE FOOTWEAR INDUSTRY

Factories Are Fairly Busy and Buyers Have Not Yet Shown Inclination to Make Extended Purchases — Leather Market Prices Strongly Maintained

To say that the shoe factories are fairly busy is about as strong a statement as the general condition of the market will bear. There are exceptions especially among those which make women's turned shoes, several of whom have booked enough orders to run their factories well into the fall, but the common report lacks that air of prosperity which is so visible among shoe merchants when trade is good.

A market of this size does not at once reflect incoming business even of normal proportions, so while some factories may be favored by a demand which approaches capacity limits, it would not be advisable to sum up the general conditions from such a basis.

Late reports from the jobbers show that though a good volume of business is coming from the road men, much of it is being placed on file, as retailers average slow in their payments and prudence forbids further extension of credits at present. Though this may prevail to some extent there are too many retailers who are worthy of confidence to ascribe to this feature the restrictive trading which has been noticed from time to time, therefore the apathy which buyers have shown and are now showing can probably be traced to a cautious attitude influenced by the belief that prices will recede.

While such a procedure may prove to be correct, it is difficult to see wherein merchants can find sufficient reason for such expectations as the basic cause for the rise or fall of shoe values lies in the condition of the leather market. Even though a dull trade or one marked with moderation, should be featured by a protracted period leather dealers are well prepared for a drop as they have already discounted such possibilities by prudent buying and a decreased output.

Reports give to the future an aspect of values beyond any yet reached, and competent judges predict that there is nothing to prevent leather prices holding steadily, and if leather, then footwear also.

Manufacturers of men's fine shoes report new business from the jobbers as slow, and the season too young to expect anything beside sizing up orders from their retailers. The salesmen are now on the road but it is hardly time to hear much from them, therefore the quiet preceding an active period is noticeable. Conditions existing in the medium grades are fairly good but not up to the mark which gives contentment to the manufacturers. This line is sold at a small profit and any upward movement in leather will effect prices at once.

The heavy grades for hard service are not in very good demand. Some of the factories are running low depending upon daily receipts to keep the force at work. Buyers are late in placing their orders and soliciting of any kind fails to get the business. Elk, chrome, kangaroo and satin shoes are very strong in price, with future prospects decidedly against late buying.

Makers of boys' and youths' shoes have about four weeks cutting ahead. All orders are comparatively small, and, though they are frequent, the aggregate is not sufficient to tax the factory output.

Men's slipper factories are now at the height of their busy season, hundreds of cases being held for shipping dates.

Manufacturers of ladies' footwear state that a good amount of business is coming in, but hardly enough to create a reserve. Those specializing turned shoes have much business ahead. This has cut into the demand for machine-sewed goods, and a lessened activity in that line is the result. Most of the manufacturers are figuring on the samples for the next season; therefore, it is too early to report on styles and combinations.

Misses' and children's shoes are having a slackening demand, and manufacturers report a sharp decline in the receipts of orders. This is the first real slow down which these factories have had for over 12 months; therefore, it is not particularly regretted.

When reports came that the receipts of cattle at the leading markets were exceeding the records, the shoe trade at once concluded that a break in hide prices was a natural consequence. Ordinarily that might be reasonable figuring but the cause being a lack of feeding ground and the starved condition of the stock it was rather to better the quality than to slaughter, so the difference between the receipts and the kill show the number now feeding. Furthermore, the sales for the week showed prices well maintained, in fact, four sales aggregating 13,700 native steers averaged ¼ cent more than a year ago. Sixteen thousand two hundred native cows averaged an advancee a fraction better than ½ cent over a year ago. One sale of 16,500 branded cows brought just ⅛ cent advance, while 9000 Texas steers sold for 1 cent more than same time last year. As sales are stubborn things, one can see that leather values are not slumping, although they may fluctuate a trifle under certain temporary environments. The trade knows that leather is high but it makes some difference whether the cause is speculative or the result of a diminishing stock and an ever growing consumption. To decide if the latter cause is correct it is only necessary to look over the government reports, which are free from partiality.

The future has a strong look, for if dealers have been able to keep prices steady during the dull months of July and August, with the more active demand which the fall months bring, prices will be easier to hold, and if the call is at all sharp the low outputs of the tanneries will be absorbed with a result too plain to mention, and although large contracts are sometimes placed both for leather and footwear at prices which startle the trade, they are caused by personal conditions and do not indicate any weakness of the raw or manufactured commodities.

Hemlock sole leather sold quite freely all the week. Lots are small, but as for that matter they have been running small for the last two years, so any sale over 10,000 sides is a rare exception. The foreign trade has been good all the month and fair-sized shipments are made every week. Prices are very firm.

Union backs have been active, several days the stores being unable to give buyers immediate attention. Dealers report no large sales, but the steady drain on the stock reduced it considerably. The market is strong at top prices.

Oak sole is a bit dull, but another week of dulness would not be noticed as stocks are low and output also with terms extremely buoyant.

Calf skins had a quiet week, still there were many sales made and they aggregated well. Light weights continue to accumulate, but heavies move fairly well. Colors sold better and mat calf also. Prices are held strong notwithstanding.

Side upper leather was in good request. Elk is the ruling favorite. Chrome blacks are going better than colors, but kangaroo and satin meet a demand which is spasmodic. Prices are unchanged, with an upward trend.

Light patent sides, and patent calf are active, neither of which can be found in stock if offered at market rates. The heavy patent sides are of low production therefore the accumulation is not large.

Glazed kid sales did not improve much last week although they were as good as the preceding one. There is no doubt that this stock has come back and a good demand would spring up if the general shoe business improves.

INTERESTING POSITION OF RUBBER SHARE MARKETS

(By our financial correspondent)

LONDON—The position of the "rubber share markets" on the London stock exchange is at present interesting. After a more or less continuous fall in prices since the boom of three years ago, there has been a marked tendency lately towards recovery from the extremely low level ruling. As the prices of most of the leading shares are now only about 25 per cent of those ruling during the boom, the magnitude of the fall will be realized. For example "Highlands and Lowlands Company" shares reached 9⅞, present price 2½; Luigi Estates £78, present prices £16 3s.

The heavy fall in shares has of course been brought about by the continued shrinkage in the price of plantation rubber itself, which is now quoted at £2 10s, against a quotation of well over £12 three years ago. The causes of the depreciation would seem to be, firstly, the larger supplies coming forward as the new plantations come into bearing; secondly, no doubt large quantities of rubber got into the hands of speculators who were unable to finance it through the heavy fall and therefore were forced to realize on an unwilling market. Then many of the big manufacturers and consumers, refraining from buying for forward delivery in quantity, have pursued a policy of hand to mouth purchases, feeling that there was every likelihood of the market going lower. This led to very large amounts being offered at the fortnightly auctions in Mincing Lane. During the last month the price has shown a tendency to gradually improve, and this has caused the buyers to come forward a little more readily, larger quantities of rubber being sold privately with the result that the amount offered at auction is very much reduced and finds ready buyers. Although a big rise is not looked for there seems a probability of the price improving to over £3.

As the all in cost of production varies between one sixth to one tenth for most of the leading companies, it will be seen that a good profit is being made even at the present low price; the return to the investor in many cases being anything from 10 per cent to 18 per cent on his money. Although it is necessary to have a high yield from an investment which is dependent upon the price of such a fluctuating article as rubber, yet the present return would seem to be attractive.

COTTON CONDITION ESTIMATE

NEW YORK—The New York Commercial estimates the condition of the cotton crop at the end of August at 71.0 and indicated yield of 13,400,000 bales.

FAVOR BONDS OF THE SMALL DENOMINATION

Believed That the Greater the Number of People Who Are Interested in a Corporation, Greater Will Be Its Success

BOND DEALER'S VIEWS

NEW YORK—Senior member of one of the largest bond houses in the street, who had in former years, himself, been a bond salesman, commenting upon the pronouncement of Col. W. P. Clough, vice-president and member of the executive board of Northern Pacific railway, to the effect that the next issue of bonds by that company will be in denominations of $100 and multiples thereof, said:

"That is a step in the right direction. Stability is increased by an increase in the number of persons interested financially in any good proposition. The Northern Pacific is in much stronger position today with its more than 18,000 stockholders than it was six years ago when there were about 2500 only. What Colonel Clough says in regard to the increase of those interested in the stock of his road, namely, that it is an indication of popular confidence, is perfectly true. Any organization that has a large number of small investors is in better position than a similar organization with a few large investors.

"Popular interest in investments in good propositions is becoming more and more manifest. The thrift of the average Frenchman and the financial strength of France as a nation are due in no small degree to the fact that all the people are given opportunity to invest their savings, no matter how small, not only in rentes and other national securities, but also in railroads and industrial corporations. Note also the marked success of the Spanish war 3 per cent loan of 1898 of our own government when there were 11,483 subscriptions for less than $100 and 14,974 subscribers for amounts of $100 to $180, against 5223 for amounts of $4000 to $4400 and only 1875 subscribers for amounts of $4500. Get a popular financial interest in railroad and industrial corporations in this country, and we shall have fewer uncalled for strikes. One hundred dollar bonds on these corporations is a step toward that end."

FINANCIAL NOTES

A Maine corporation has been chartered, $1,000,000 capital, to engage in the making of a metal motor truck tire.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company's business for year to Nov. 1, 1913, will exceed $33,000,000. But for floods and strike, $40,000,000 might have been reached.

With ending of the 1912-13 cotton season Galveston established a record for world's cotton receipts and export record for one year. Exports total up 4,100,691 bales.

New Orleans has made initial move toward building cotton warehouse with capacity of 1,500,000 bales. To that end a $3,000,000 5 per cent bond issue has been authorized.

Pittsburgh special says that, financed by New York capitalists, the First-Second National Bank, which failed a few months ago, is to be reopened shortly under a new name.

The $10,000,000 M. Rumely Company note syndicate, consisting of William Salomon & Co. and Hallgarten & Co., formed last March, has been extended for six months. President Funk says the net current assets of the company on July 31, 1913, were in excess of $19,000,000, after deducting all current liabilities and reserve against notes receivable.

In July, issues of new securities at London were £9,500,000 below the same month in 1912, but £10,000,000 above 1911, and about £2,700,000 above July average of the decade past. Issues of government and municipal securities were £10,356,000, against £3,012,100 in July, 1912.

President Baer of Reading, said in Paris: "The railway situation in general in America appears to me to be very good. The sole criticism that might be made in the last few months is that some companies have had a great deal of short-term credit paper out, but this has been gradually corrected."

Present gold situation of Germany was put in a favorable light by Acting President Otto von Glasenapp of the Imperial Bank of Germany last week. He said the situation fully justified a reduction of the bank rate, but prospective demands on the Imperial Bank in the autumn rendered such a step inadvisable. The surplus of gold imports over gold exports in 1913, he said, had been $44,250,000.

San Francisco Chamber of Commerce reports 50 ships under construction for business via Panama canal and that 30 steamship companies say their routes will be adjusted to meet changes in shorter line between Atlantic and Pacific. East Asiatic Steamship has ordered seven 60,000-ton ships to carry California fruits to Europe via canal. Grand Trunk Pacific is building several fast ships to operate between British Columbia and California. Hamburg-American will establish an around-the-world service via Panama and Suez canals.

ERIE BUSINESS MAY ESTABLISH A NEW HIGH RECORD

NEW YORK—Erie did the largest year's business in its history in the 12 months ended with June 30, last, but indications point to another record in the current year.

Resumption of mining operations after a three months' suspension of operations in the anthracite fields from April to June, 1912, inclusive, produced abnormally heavy coal traffic conditions in July and August of last year in the effort to replenish depleted stocks. Comparisons of the initial month's operations in the current year are therefore being made with that heavy traffic period.

Nevertheless, Erie in July reported an increase of $156,000, or 2.07 per cent in gross over the heavy gross of July, 1912, and similar conditions are appearing for August. For the first three weeks of the current month gross gains have amounted to about $60,000, bringing total gain for the year to date up to nearly 220,000.

When comparisons get away from the period of extraordinarily heavy coal business in 1912, they may be expected to show a better percentage of gain unless in the meantime a smaller corn crop and political and financial developments cause an unexpectedly large letup in business. If the Erie can maintain only half as large a ratio of gain this year as it actually reported last year, its business for the current 12 months will approximate $66,000,000 or a gain of $10,000,000 in two years.

Nor is a gain of this magnitude improbable for not later than Nov. 1, and practically by Oct. 1, the Erie will be a double tracked line to Chicago and capacity for moving tonnage will be very largely augmented. These improvements are expected to increase the company's facilities by 50 per cent and permit of lower cost on traffic movement.

CONDITION OF CANADIAN BANKS

OTTAWA—Condition of Canadian banks as of July 31, as shown by the first monthly statement under the new bank act, made the following items:

Demand deposits $356,585,196, decrease $6,184,540; notice deposits $621,347,388, increase $1,581,581; deposits elsewhere than in Canada $86,600,194, decrease $17,689,588; total liabilities $1,275,267, decrease $4,872,954.

Call loans in Canada were $67,991,255, decrease $651,122; call loans outside Canada $89,266,235, decrease $97,285; current loans in Canada $858,429,069, decrease $40,830,940; other current loans outside Canada $42,960,513, increase $6,065,832; total assets $1,519,517,013, decrease $1,837,944.

Specie holdings increased $5,000,000 and circulation increased $6,000,000.

ESTIMATES OF COTTON YIELD POSSIBILITIES

Expectation of the Trade Regarding Condition of Crop Is 70 Which Is Much Lower Than for Similar Date in 1912

GOVERNMENT REPORT

WASHINGTON—In a report issued today the department of agriculture places the average condition of cotton on Aug. 25 at 68.2 of a normal against 79.6 on July 25 last, 74.8 on Aug. 25, 1912, 73.2 on Aug. 25, 1911, and 74.7 the average on Aug. 25 of the past 10 years.

NEW YORK—Average condition of cotton at the end of August, based on six private estimates issued last week, was almost exactly 71 per cent, and the average estimate of 70 members of the New York cotton exchange was 69.9 per cent. It may fairly be said, therefore, that the expectation of the trade at the close of the week was for a condition report of about 70 per cent.

Should the government report confirm this estimate, it will mean a considerably lower condition than in 1911, nearly 10 points less than the condition of a year ago and nearly five points under the 10-year average. It is necessary to go back to the crop failure year 1909 for a condition under 70; in that year the official report showed a condition of 63.7 per cent. Figures for recent seasons by states are appended. Cotton condition, by states:

	July 25, 1913	Aug 25, 1912	Aug 25, 1911	10-yr av
North Carolina	77	75	76	78
South Carolina	75	73	74	77
Georgia	76	70	81	77
Alabama	79	75	80	76
Mississippi	77	70	70	75
Louisiana	79	74	69	69
Texas	81	76	68	72
Oklahoma	81	84	92	76
Tennessee	90	86	88	83
Arkansas	87	77	78	77
United States	79.6	74.8	73.2	74.7

A condition of 100 at this time would, according to government computations, based on previous yields, indicate an average yield of 252 pounds per acre. A condition of 70 would therefore mean a yield of 176.4 pounds per acre. Based on the official estimate of acreage of 35,622,000 acres, such a yield would point to a total crop of 13,145,000 bales of 478 pounds each. The appended table shows the indicated yield at various percentage conditions ranging from 68 to 72:

	Indicated yld per acre	T'tl yld bales, 478 lbs net
68	171.36	12,770,000
69	173.88	12,958,000
70	178.92	13,333,000
71	178.92	13,333,000
72	181.44	13,521,400

These computed figures, it should be stated, are considerably lower than trade ideas of probable yield based on percentage here used.

The acreage this year and in 1912, the August, 1912, condition, and final 1912 yield, by states, follow:

DROP IN STEEL PLATE PRICES

PITTSBURGH—The plate market is now generally 1.40 cents, Pittsburgh, or $1 a ton below the level which obtained from early October until lately. Eastern mills have been shading plates for a couple of months, and lately have gone as low as 1.35 cents, Pittsburgh.

The greatest stronghold of the finished steel market, plates, shapes and bars, has now yielded partially. Shapes are still quotable generally at 1.45 cents, Pittsburgh, but in addition to shading of $1 a ton in the East, occasionally $2 a ton, there have been some irregularities in other sections. Bars remain very firm at 1.40 cents, Pittsburgh, in all territory.

The mills insist that a yielding in the plate and shape market will not affect steel bars, as they are an entirely separate commodity, and can properly be held at a higher price than plates and shapes if demand warrants.

STATISTICS OF FOREIGN COPPER

LONDON—The fortnightly statistics show that the European stocks of copper, including Hamburg, Rotterdam and Bremen on August 31 decreased 1020 tons, while copper supplies afloat increased 400 tons, making a net decrease in the visible supply of 620 tons to 34,055 tons as compared with 34,660 tons on Aug. 15 and 50,232 tons on Aug. 31, 1912.

A GENUINE BOND BARGAIN

The decline in prices of high-grade bonds has not been confined solely to the most active steam railroad issues, although such issues have naturally attracted the most attention because of their prominence. The present condition of the bond market enables us to offer an exceptionally well-secured first lien public utility bond with a liberal sinking fund to net 5.64%. We refer to

Federal Light & Traction Co., First Lien 5% Bonds, Due 1942

Net earnings are over three times the interest charges on this issue. Sinking fund now operative for over $50,000 per year, should retire 40% of bonds outstanding by maturity. Bonds outstanding, $3,471,500, followed by junior securities having present market value of over $4,500,000.

BANK POSITION THROUGHOUT WORLD MUCH STRENGTHENED

Financial Institutions of United States and Europe in Good Shape to Meet Usual Autumn Drain—Investment Situation Has Undergone Improvement

NEW YORK—Concerning the financial and business situation the Fourth National Bank of New York says in its September circular:

The money market situation has been benefited by the action of the secretary of the treasury in offering to place, if necessary, from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 with the depositary banks. The distribution of these deposits will do a great deal of good in enabling the banks of the South and West to provide for the crop-moving demands with much less difficulty than seemed probable a few weeks ago. The money will be used to good advantage as the treasury has been careful to stipulate just what uses it should be put to in the effort to relieve the tension which so often develops during the harvesting season.

The operation marks a most interesting departure in the acceptance of collateral to secure these deposits. Under the new ruling the banks can put up high grade commercial paper for a portion of the collateral required, with the understanding that it be accepted at 65 per cent of its face value, and that the paper thus offered be approved by a committee of clearing house bankers in the various reserve centers where the distribution is made. This change is most interesting, and while the terms of the offer are new, there is no doubt that high grade commercial paper is perfectly safe as collateral for such deposits. Well selected paper of that class offers the best security in the world for a bank to invest in, and if under certain conditions, it be accepted by the government as collateral for public deposits, the market for paper will be extended and the banks will be able to purchase it to a larger extent than ever before to the great benefit of the mercantile community. Easier conditions prevail in the money market, but rates continue firm, especially for the long periods. This will probably continue for some time to come.

The great banks of Europe have made further progress in strengthening their position through the accumulation of an immense gold reserve. The Bank of England for the third week of July reported the largest gold holdings for that date in any year since 1896. Its ratio of reserves to liabilities stands higher than the figure reported at that time in any of the last 16 years. The Bank of France has increased its gold holdings during the year no less than $24,000,000. Its gold holdings, except for the year 1909, have never been exceeded for this time of year. The Bank of Germany also holds $30,000,000 more cash than it reported at this date in 1912. These amounts show that the principal banks of Europe are making decided progress in the accumulation of a large gold reserve which will stand them in good stead during the period when pending loans are to be financed. The New York banks have also a good surplus for this season, and because of the thorough-going liquidation that has taken place the general bank position is today unquestionably strong. So much has been done in preparing for the autumn drain that the chances are that the demands of that period will be satisfied without undue difficulty and the banks will unquestionably extend whatever accommodation is needed by legitimate borrowers of all classes. The situation may be helped also by the inflow of gold from Argentina, which has already begun and which is likely to continue with occasional interruptions for some time to come. It is an altogether natural exchange operation, and may result in our getting back from South America a large portion of the $22,000,000 gold which we shipped early in the year to that quarter for the account of banks in London and Paris.

The investment situation is improving. The success attending the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific syndicate operation has had a most reassuring effect. There is a better demand for bonds both from private and financial institution buyers, and it looks now as if the inquiry would broaden further to the betterment of the whole investment market. What is also reassuring is the indication that investors are gradually evincing an inclination to take up long term bonds rather than only such securities as have one or two years to run. This marks a definite change for the better, in that it shows confidence is returning and that the time may not be far distant when normal conditions will again prevail. It is, however, not yet a normal bond market for the reason that investors are still timid and hesitating, but the uncertainty is not nearly as great as it was a month ago, and the chances are that the recovery now under way will continue. One reason for the improvement has been the moderation shown by the bankers in the output of new security issues. There has been no glut in the bond market here in the sense that there has been abroad. The recent flotations have been for comparatively moderate amounts and were fairly well taken. Some short term bonds have shown a tendency to improve in price. This has been true of stocks where the advance has carried some of the standard shares from eight to twelve points above the low level of June. Although the stock market inquiry has been largely professional, there has been some excellent buying of high grade securities based on the theory that the seasoned dividend paying shares had declined as low as they could be reasonably expected to go.

Prevalence of very high temperatures in the corn belt has unquestionably wrought serious damage to the growing corn. The government crop report for September will show the amount of damage done. The August report indicated a loss of 11 per cent in the condition of corn since July, and it was then estimated that the crop would be 450,000,000 bushels below the high record of last year. Since the returns for July were compiled the great producing states of Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska have experienced a serious drought. Some of the experts figure that the damage will reduce the final yield below 2,500,000,000 bushels as compared with the record crop of 3,124,000,000 bushels in 1912. As against this shortage, however, there stands a record breaking winter wheat crop, with indications of a total yield of all wheat of 744,000,000 bushels, which would be within 4,000,000 bushels of the record crop raised in 1901. It is yet too early to tell just what the damage to the corn and other grains has been, or exactly what the outlook is for the crops as a whole. Indications are, however, that because of the advance in the price of corn, the increased production of wheat and the large supplies of corn, oats, hay and barley carried over from last year, the purchasing power of many of the agricultural districts will not be materially affected.

Uncertainty as to the outcome of affairs in Mexico has had an unsettling effect upon the investment market, as there is an immense amount of American capital invested there, and within the last few months French bankers have made special advances to the Mexican government. The situation, which is becoming rather tense, is full of difficulties which those at a distance are scarcely in a position to appreciate. A great deal of excellent work has been done in the direction of straightening out the tangle, and it is to be hoped that a solution will be reached without resorting to violence. There is reason to believe that some of the European powers will urge strongly upon the Huerta government the necessity of accepting the policy proposed by the United States government. Whether or not this is done it seems certain that the situation will be materially helped by the movement already started to restore peace in Mexico.

There is an excellent volume of business still being done in most sections of the United States. Recent advices from the West have been eminently optimistic, both in respect to the volume of orders which is now being turned in and also as to the outlook for a very much better business in the autumn. It is also evident that the situation at many of the manufacturing centers is better than it was a month ago and that in spite of the hesitant tone which will prevail in some industries until the new tariff law is enacted, present conditions are, on the whole, reassuring. There is abundant basis for the feeling expressed in many quarters that there will be a further revival in business activity as soon as the new tariff law has been placed on the statute books.

CHARLES EVANS HAS FINE SCORE IN SECOND ROUND

OUIMET GETS A 151

GARDEN CITY, L. I.—Charles Evans, Jr., of Chicago, today undoubtedly won the low medal prize for the opening rounds of the national amateur golf championship on the local links. Evans played a 71 on his second round today and with the 77 played yesterday his total was 148, three strokes better than the total of Francis V. Ouimet of Boston, who was his nearest competitor. Ouimet played a 76 today, making his total 151. Several scores were yet to be turned in at 1:30; but it was believed Evans would not be beaten.

Evans was the winner of the low medal prize during the championship play at Chicago last year.

Jerome D. Travers appeared to be in danger of failing to qualify as a result of his playing today. Travers played a 79 yesterday and today his score was even worse. He took an 86, playing the last hole, for which 3 is par, in 7.

Walter J. Travis was third for medal score before all of the players were in. He played a 76 on his morning round, making his total 152. Robert A. Gardner of Chicago played a 74, his total being 156.

The first play today was for the qualification of nine out of 16 men who tied in the round yesterday with a score of 86. The following were the winners and qualified for the second round:

Chisolm Beach, Fox Hill; A. F. Kammer, Fox Hill; George Brokaw, Garden Cit; Ralph Peters, Jr., Garden City; Gilbert Waldo, Jr., Detroit; Perry Pyne, Princeton; W. H. Gardner, Buffalo; Heinrich Schmidt, Worcester, Mass; F. E. Bowers, Bridgeport.

Bowers was the only man to qualify who was forced to play more than one hole. The other eight made four each on the first hole. Bowers and others made fives and sixes and Max Marston lost to Bowers on the third hole.

The best scores for the second round and totals for the two rounds of play follow:

Fred Martin, Manchester, Vt., 82, total 162; Buckingham, Merriam, Waterbury, Conn., 83, total 165; Philip Carter, New York, 79, total 164; Hamilton Kerr, New York, 80, total 165; Charles Van Vleck Jr., Newark, 84, total 167; John M. Ward, New York, 80, total 164; W. C. Fownes Jr., Pittsburgh, 80, total 161; Archie Reid, New York, 83, total 162.

F. J. Ouimet of the Woodland Golf Club of Auburndale, Mass., present Massachusetts champion, had the honor of leading the field in the first round Monday with the fine card of 75. He played some fine all-around golf and but for one or two weak shots would have bettered his card by two or three strokes. Ouimet's general playing was above criticism. He kept true to the course and showed some of the best putting he has yet turned in in a big meet. His card follows:

Out	4 3 4 5 4 4 5 4 4	37
In	3 4 4 5 5 5 5 5 3	38—75

Next to Ouimet came the veteran W. J. Travis of the home club. He turned in a 76. It was good playing by the veteran, and but for weak approaching at the sixteenth and seventeenth holes he would easily have made it 74. His card follows:

Out	4 3 4 5 4 4 5 4 4	37
In	4 4 4 6 4 4 5 5 3	39—76

E. M. Byers of Allegheny and Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater came next with cards of 77. The showing of Evans was not up to expectations and during the first nine holes it looked as if the former western champion might not qualify. His card shows brilliant playing at times and rather indifferent work at others.

The work of Jerome D. Travers of Upper Montclair, the present champion, was watched with much interest. He turned in a card of 79 for the 18 holes, but it was not until the last round was finished that his friends were sure of his qualifying. He took 44 for the first nine holes. This was one of the highest cards for that round to qualify and but for a brilliant 35 coming home, the chances are that the champion would have made a very unsatisfactory day's showing. This 35 was the best turned in for the day and showed that the champion is up to his true form despite the showing made on the outward journey. His card follows:

Out	5 4 4 7 4 6 6 4 4	44
In	4 5 3 4 4 4 4 4 3	35—79

A surpise of the tournament was the showing of Heinrich Schmidt of Worcester. He came in with a card of 86 which makes it necessary for him to compete today for one of the nine qualifying places. He played indifferent golf and did not show anything like his true form.

Probably the biggest upset of the first round was the elimination of Oswald Kirkby. This player was generally regarded as one of the strong contenders for the title and the fact that 90 was the best he could do for the 18 holes was a big surprise to the followers of the tournament. Kirkby was at a loss to understand his showing as he stated after the play that he could not see but what he was playing up to his usual form. The summary:

Manager Chance and his New York Americans meet the Boston Americans at Fenway park this afternoon in the third and next to the last game of the season of 1913 in this city. The former Cub leader is especially anxious to win today and announced that he would use Ray Keating, the former Lawrence New England league pitcher in the box with Sweeney doing the catching. It was Keating who had the honor of winning the first game for New York this year and he is expected to force the Red Sox to their very best.

Manager Carrigan plans to use Anderson in the box with Nunamaker doing the catching. Anderson showed up well on his last western trip and should hold the visitors well in hand today.

OARSMEN FROM BOSTON MAKE FINE SHOWING

Ayer and Tudor of the Union B. C. and Livingstone of Riverside B. C. Win Places

NEW YORK—Boston, with its Union and Riverside crews, made a showing at the middle states' regatta on the Harlem river course here Monday. James B. Ayer of the Union Boat Club of Boston, Pearce of the Nonpareil Rowing Club of New York, W. Tudor Gardiner of the Union Boat Club of Boston and Henry Livingstone of the Riverside Boat Club of Cambridge, Mass., qualified in their respective heats for the association single sculls.

In the final they went away to an even start. Gardiner and Ayer at once left the other two. Pearce made a fight for only a short time and Livingstone did not finish. Both the former Harvard men had it all their own way. It was a fast race, Ayer winning by a scant third of a length. The time was 5m. 25s.

The best race of the day, and the most important one, was that for senior quadruple sculls. The Riverside Boat Club of Cambridge was the winner after a most spectacular struggle. Cary and William Faulkner at bow and stroke respectively, with Davis and Livingstone in the middle of the boat, made a hard quartet. They outsculled and outsteered the others.

Their competitors were the New York Athletic Club, composed of the veterans Tracey, McKenna, Spalding and Kushe, and the New Rochelle Rowing Club boat in which were the Carter brothers, Wilde and Diaz.

The Riverside men won, rowing well within themselves, by an easy half length. New York Athletic Club beat New Rochelle by a quarter of a length. The time was remarkable under the conditions, 4m. 37 2-5s. and 4m. 38 4-5s.

The Union men, Tudor Gardner and Paul Withington, easily won the senior double sculls.

In the senior four-oared shells, won by the Ariels of Baltimore in a row over, the Metropolitans of New York were disqualified and the referee ordered the Maltas of Philadelphia and the Ariels to row over the last quarter from the same positions they were in at the time of the foul. At that time the Maltas were two lengths behind the Ariels. The Maltas contended that the quarter should be rowed on even terms, and when the referee refused to acquiesce they withdrew and the Ariels rowed over the quarter alone.

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY PLANNED FOR BOSTON RINK

The announcement that plans are under way for a professional ice hockey team in Boston this fall and winter will come as a pleasant surprise to followers of this popular Canadian game. It has been made by M. Lougee, manager of the Boston Arena, who will go to Cleveland, Ohio, this week where a meeting of the managers of the six largest rinks in this country will take place next Saturday for the purpose of forming a six-team circuit for professional hockey.

The cities to be represented in this new league will be Boston, New York, Syracuse, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Houghton, Michigan. The promoters of the new project also hope to affiliate with the National Hockey Association of Canada, which controls the professional game in that country, so that an international series between teams of the two leagues may be a feature of the schedule.

The professional exhibitions in past seasons in this city by Canadians have always proved big attractions and followers of the sport have often asked why a professional team has not been established in Boston as a permanent feature of winter sport. It looks now as though the carefully laid plans of the rink managers will materialize this coming season.

Manager Lougee of the local rink is also busy at work preparing the schedule of games to be played at the Arena this year. He states that two and probably three strong local amateur teams will be seen in action here and also that the at-home games of Harvard will be contested in Boston.

H. A. H. Baker, the famous skating leader of the Princeton team, will be seen here with that team in three or more games and a number of other college sevens will compete at the rink.

The skating season will open in November following the six-day bicycle race, under the direction of A. McLean, the first week of that month and a production of the Irish historical pageant the second week. The presentation of this latter event will be given for the first time in this city.

BASEBALL PICKUPS

Pitcher Morgan, formerly with the Athletics, but now with Cincinnati, lost his first National league game yesterday.

—ooo—

Pitcher George Foster of the Boston Americans has signed a contract with that club for next year. He is the first player to sign for 1914.

—ooo—

It is not often that four teams win double-headers in one day, as was the case with Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Detroit yesterday. The work of the Athletics counted most, as they downed Washington.

UNITED STATES LEADS GERMANY IN SONDER RACES

abilities of the six boats had been pretty thoroughly tested yesterday, when the American yacht Cima won a long drawn out contest, it was hoped that today would bring a trifle sterner conditions. The morning weather, however, was disappointing. The same dull haze of the early Indian summer and a continuation of the faint airs from the south were much in evidence when morning colors boomed from the flagship Shimna, so the amateur tars started out with their provision lockers well stocked and a prospect of another rolling day in the bay.

The American skippers were a trifle more confident than their Teutonic antagonists, but there was not a Yankee Corinthian who was not willing to admit that the foreigners were still dangerous and that the Angela IV. would always prove a factor in the contests no matter what the wind conditions might be. In fact much of the interest in today's contest seemed to center in the royal yacht, which is distinguished by the blue coat of arms of the Crown Prince William in her mainsail. Many of the American sailors admitted before the race today that they looked back apprehensively at that blue shield many times yesterday and were not so sure but that they might not have to look ahead at it still more anxiously today.

Many of the characteristic lines of the 1911 American champion Bibelot were embodied in the Angela IV. and while all three of this year's Yankee fleet defeated her yesterday, it was agreed that the race was more of a wind-hunting expedition than an actual test of the sail qualities of the different yachts and that at times when the breeze did perk up the Angela IV. moved very fast.

The Serum, another of the German fleet, also held attention, but the Wittelsbach X. was a disappointment, especially after her foreign reputation as a drifter.

Cima, Sprig and Ellen was the order of the first three yachts in the opening event Monday. That the race was hardly a true test of the merits of the six yachts was the general verdict of those who saw the race. There was very little wind blowing, and it was practically a drifting match. This was particularly true of the first time round the triangle, which was the course used for this race. All of the skippers were looking for little puffs of wind and the home yachtsmen appeared to be the most successful in this quest.

There was no time during the entire race that the wind blew better than two miles an hour and it looked very much as if the race would have to be called off as the chances of any of the boats crossing the finish line inside of the time limit did not appear to be very good.

The yachts were sent off on the triangular course, with a beat of 2½ miles and what was intended to be two reaches, but which proved to be a run and a reach, the yachts sailing the 7½-mile triangle twice. The Americans defeated the Germans in the contest for place at the start in the breath of a breeze, and the visitors began the contest with a handicap of nearly three minutes.

The Sprig obtained the best berth, with the Ellen cut ahead, but to leeward, while astern came the Cima. The Angela IV. had the best of it in the German fleet, with the Serum not far off and the Wittelsbach X. in the rear.

The breeze proved so fickle in the first 10 minutes that when the Sprig and the Ellen tacked in shore the Cima crossed the bow of both, while the Angela was close astern of the Americans.

After the first tack the Cima was never headed, although at times in the runs and reaches the stern boats gained. In the last leg of the second round, with victory almost within his grasp, Captain Lowell felt his chances slipping away as his boat drifted into a calm spot and almost lost headway. But a little puff of wind came in from the sea in the last quarter of a mile and the Cima, drawing ahead again, crossed the line in the lead.

The Cima was the first around the first mark at 12:30, having taken 1h. 20m. to beat two and one-half miles. She was followed two minutes later by the Sprig, while the Angela IV. proved the best of the foreign yachts.

The Cima broke out her spinnaker top to port on the run to the second mark but the wind still proved very light, and it was 1.15.50 before she gybed around the flag, with a lead of 1m. and 50s. over the Sprig.

It was a reach to the starting mark on the finish of the first round, and the Cima continued to show her heels. She turned the home buoy at 1:53, and, flattening sheets, started on the last round of the course, with apparently only just a chance to finish the race inside the time limit of 5½ hours.

The contest between the Ellen and the Sprig furnished the only excitement of the day, although at times the Angela IV. was very close. The Ellen took second place from the Sprig in the first beat to windward and on the second leg of the first time around the triangle had a comfortable margin of three minutes over the Saltonstall boat.

At the second mark on the last time around, the Ellen's lead over the Sprig was 2m. 18s., but in the reach to the finish the latter held up a trifle, and, getting more air, overhauled the Curtis boat 10 feet from the line. The yachts were very close together, and only the committee, sighting from flag to flag, was able to give the place to the Sprig by one second.

The American yachtsmen were unanimous in their opinion that the Angela IV. was the fastest of the foreign fleet and would prove a dangerous antagonist under better conditions. The summary:

SINTRAM WINS BERMUDA CUP IN OCEAN RACE

The Sintram, owned by Mullen and Crawford of the South Boston Yacht Club, won the city of Boston Bermuda cup Monday in what is said to be one of the best ocean races ever held in Massachusetts bay. The Marie L., owned by A. W. Finlay, finished second. The boats all started well, with a light wind. It was announced by President J. J. Harland of the Interclub Y. R. A. that the championship pennants of the season—the Bermuda, Turner and Harold Brown cups—would all be presented at the cup night of the Winthrop Yacht Club, Oct. 11.

GLOUCESTER—Of the 16 boats in five classes that started out on the Gloucester Y. C. race scheduled Monday, only one class, the 15-footer, finished, the others being becalmed. Of the 15-footers, the Weave, owned by S. W. Parker finished first, with the Tew Lom, owned by N. Choate, second. At Annisquam in the afternoon the Tobasco, Jr., 14-foot class, owned by H. H. Wiggin, the Calista, class E., owned by J. B. Williams, and the Meew II, owned by P. Smith, were the winners.

QUINCY—The Thordis, owned by Dr. F. E. Dawes, won the ocean race of the Wollaston Yacht Club Monday, covering the 20-knot course in 8h. 9m. In the three class race held by the Quincy Y. C. over a nine-mile course, the Dartwell, class D, owned by I. M. Whittemore; the Hush, Class C, owned by J. Kitson, and the Yarita, class F, owned by H. Ayer, were the winners. The Yarita also won a special cup offered by the Quincy Y. C.

GOLFERS OUT IN FORCE ON BOSTON LINKS

Over 1000 golf enthusiasts took advantage of the holiday Monday and were out on the links of the various country clubs in and about greater Boston. The courses in the majority of cases were in excellent condition, and the scores were good. At the Woodland G. C. over 100 were out, R. M. Purves winning the class A play, and N. P. Trickey winning in class B. At Albermarle, M. P. Graham and L. H. Harrington were the class A and B winners in the morning, and M. P. Graham with A. Nickerson in the afternoon. C. J. Chapman won the Labor day cup at the Commonwealth. A. J. Rowan led the field at Oakley, while G. J. Lovely was the low man at Brae-Burn. W. S. King and R. A. Murray were the winners at Chestnut Hill and Newton.

PLYMOUTH—The semi-finals were played Monday in the Plymouth C. C. golf tournament. In the finals, R. Hornblower will meet Paul Jones for the President's cup, and A. R. Mayer will play Robert Cowen for the Director's cup.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass.—The Labor day golf tournament of the Country Club was won by E. R. Lewis and R. A. Swan, who tied for first place, and will play off at a later date. E. C. Taber won a prize for the lowest gross score.

BROCKTON, Mass.—Dr. C. L. M. Holmberg won a 36-hole match at the Brockton Country Club Monday with a score of 141. H. W. Flagg tied with Dr. Holmberg for the lowest gross score, each having 169.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass.—With a total of 308 Vincent S. Lawrence of Boston won the 72-hole club championship at the Tedesco links Monday. His score for the four rounds was 78, 76, 79, 75—308.

BOSTON WINS BOTH GAMES

Boston defeated the New York Americans here Monday in both games played at Fenway park. Moseley, the recruit that is showing so well on the local staff, was in the box for Boston in the first game, and held the visitors under control easily. Collins pitched for Boston in the second contest until the eighth inning, when he was relieved by Hall, who in turn was relieved by Leonard, who held the place well. The score:

GIANTS BEAT BOSTON TWICE

NEW YORK—New York won the morning game from Boston Monday, a spirited pitchers' battle between Demaree and Hess, the score being 3 to 2. In one of the most sensational pitching duels ever seen on the Polo grounds, the Giants defeated Boston, 2 to 1, in the fourteenth inning of the afternoon game. Marquard and Rudolph were the opposing pitchers, and each man allowed 10 hits. The winning run was made when Merkle tripled with one out and scored on Murray's single. The score:

STEADFASTNESS

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

No one can read carefully the writings of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science without observing the persistence with which she directs the attention away from all that is material to the spiritual facts of being. This is true of all spiritual teachers and especially of the Great Teacher himself, who constantly reminded his followers of the supremacy of that which is spiritual. Indeed it was this unswerving adherence to spiritual facts which gave Jesus such power in meeting and overcoming adverse conditions. If a storm arose that would seem ready to engulf him and his chosen band, he at once fearlessly recognized the presence and power of divine harmony and was thus enabled to speak with authority to the turbulent elements. His rebukes to the disciples showed that he attributed their mistakes to their lack of reliance on spiritual Truth, which was never absent, and to their belief in the mortal sense testimony which was the opposite of Truth.

It is this recognition of the everpresence of good and of all the activities of good which imparts the ability to withstand whatever would tend to interfere with or pervert our sense of right, whatever would confuse our sense of what is real and true. Mrs. Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 495): "When the illusion of sickness or sin tempts you, cling steadfastly to God and His idea." Through this loyalty to our highest and best concept of being we are gradually freed from whatever is imperfect and discordant and brought into a realization of harmony.

But this is not all. There is more than a mere passive submission to the influences of goodness in the better concept of being; there is also the sense of strength and power, and to this no doubt Paul had reference when he exhorted the church to be "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." All the good ever accomplished in the world has been done by faithful perseverence along right lines. But such effort demands undivided attention—the goal must be kept in sight and nothing allowed to distract or interfere with singleness of purpose to do right. There is no time left in which to observe others, either by way of curiosity or criticism. The importance of such consecration is brought out in the command of Jesus to the seventy disciples when he directed them to "salute no man by the way." That eastern salutation was rather a distracting affair, and the disciples could not afford to turn their attention from the business on hand to indulge in the ceremonies of social greetings.

The highest ideal for which any man can strive is to live a perfect spiritual life, and in order to attain such an end he must keep the perfect model always in sight. Perfection, however, can never be accomplished by attempting to cast a good mortal in a mortal mold. We cannot develop the imperfect into perfection nor bring good out of evil. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," said Jesus. We must separate ourselves from the mortal sense of things to find our true being. Not only must we keep the perfect model in thought but we must identify ourselves with it. "Now are we the sons of God," says the Apostle, and by the acknowledgment of such relationship each one of us takes his place in the heavenly family where he is superior to the false claims of material sense, a place which every one has the divine right to possess.

Many hindrances may, yea, will, present themselves to prevent our taking this stand. Excuses in plenty will be put forward for indulgence in sense pleasures and indifference to duty, but the faithful follower is not turned aside by these. Human experience would indicate that to live a perfect life is beyond our present attainment; nevertheless Jesus' command is, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." No one can afford to be satisfied with anything short of this goal. The plea of mortal weakness, disposition, environment, is no true excuse. These are simply obstacles to be overcome.

Any argument that it is not to be expected that perfection can be attained here and now while we are surrounded by so-called materiality is but one of the wiles of evil. It is an effort to force the admission that material weakness and suffering are conditions which are inevitable. This is not the case. "The glorious liberty of the children of God" does not imply submission to error or bondage of any sort. To be steadfast means literally to stand fast and the Apostle says, "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

The persistent elevation and purification of thought is emphasized frequently by Mrs. Eddy in all her writings as the means of salvation for mortals. For instance, on page 261 of Science and Health, we read: "Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionably to their occupancy of your thoughts."

Tribute to Canada

Under the caption, "If Canada were to annex the United States," a writer in the Century magazine pays high tribute to the progress and splendid energy of Canada. She has proved herself, thinks this writer, James Davenport Whelpley, really a strong nation, commanding the respect of her mother land and of her neighbors, and the idea of joining the two countries by any sort of treaty is only the simple working out of the whole trend of development on the American continent. Canada and the United States belong together by every fact of topography and productive power. The river valleys for travel routes run north and south, and the land apart from politics is really one. So whether Canada joins the States or the States join Canada the natural and inevitable thing must be closer and closer identity of interests and thought. This is of course only one more note of world unity.

To Appreciate Poetry

Lad of Italy Now American Bank President

Among several stories of interesting people the American Magazine tells about Cesare Conti, a bank president who rose to that post from his start as office boy. He came to New York as a lad from Italy, went to the public school till he was 16, then entered the bank which he now serves as president. He is called an example of old-world culture and new world energy. His offices, we read, are full of interesting things which betray the artistic bent, all intermingled with posters and advertisements that show the varied interests of the man. He is the head of many firms of widely differing interests. These maintain immigrant banks in most of the large American cities, run steamships, export automobiles, shoes and machinery to Italy, and import Italian products.

But Mr. Conti's most interesting work is acting as unofficial ambassador between Italy and the United States. He has promoted mutual respect between the two nations by furthering international exchange, and acts as a voluntary consul, helping his compatriots in America in many ways and advising even with his own government as to its relations with the United States.

No reception committee to Italian ambassadors, consuls, generals, or other prominent visitors is complete without his name at the head, says this magazine article. In politics he has always been a Democrat, and is a stanch personal friend of the President and of the Governor of New York. It is because of these varied interests, these multiple activities, that he has been made a "chevalier" by the King of Italy and pronounced a "prince" by the American people. To immigrants he is a shining light of encouragement toward striving for success in this land; to Americans he is a proof of the value of the newcomer's contribution to the nation.

To Do a Kindness

If you wish to know how to do a kindness judiciously, put yourself in the place of him you desire to benefit.—Mme. de Puisieux.

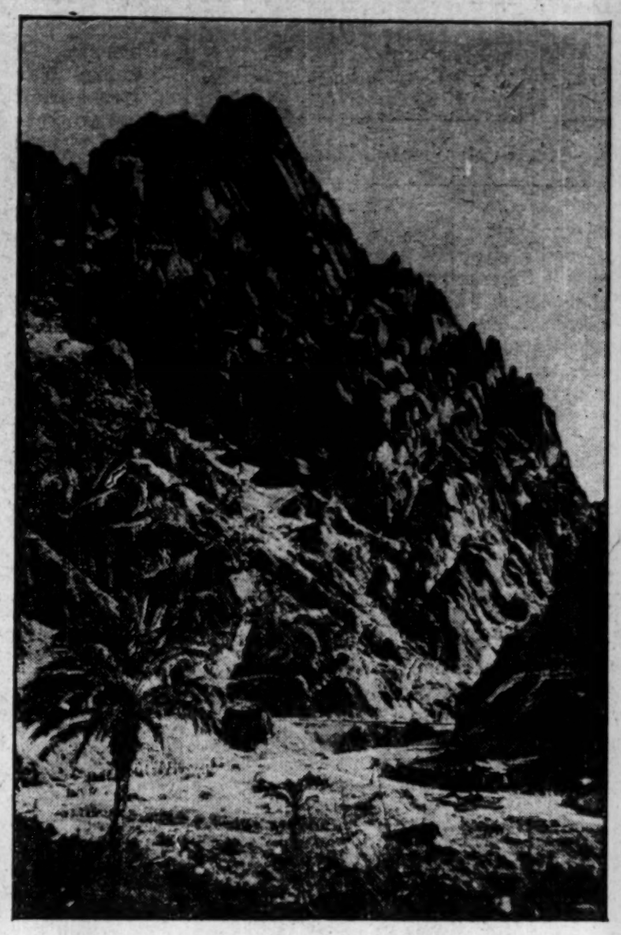

CASA GRANDE EXODUS UNEXPLAINED

About when Casa Grande, the Indian castle in Arizona, was abandoned is not yet known. It was a very long time ago. Usually, in the cases of these old ruins in the Southwest, there are signs that the community moved when the water supply became inadequate. This is indicated at Casa Grande. Except for floods in the Gila, there is no water. Even the extraordinary aqueducts of the ancients, some of which may be seen at Casa Grande, would not suffice for a numerous community to live in such a place as that is today.

As in many another place which was one time populous, Casa Grande appears to have become uninhabitable for any such population as built it and for a long time lived in it. Perhaps the last Montezuma who reigned there, if the place was inhabited by the race afterward found in Mexico, led this people out of that fast drying region into the fertile and well watered valley of Ana-Huac, where they were found by the ruthless Conquistidore.

What is now called Clan House No. 1 was in all probability the royal castle, says the St. Louis Post Despatch. As architecture went in those days, it was a very fine structure. Doubtless, too, there were trees around it, and lawns, and flowers, and it was only after the exodus southward that the desert overwhelmed these things to reduce the castle of the Montezumas to two low mounds of sand. Water in all that country makes the desert to bloom, the cottonwoods to cast their grateful shade and the palms to lift their fronds in the desert air. No one who has worked among the ruins of the Southwest has been able satisfactorily to determine just what happened to the water supply of all that country. In the Chaco canon of New Mexico, where not a drop of water occurs today through the dry season, there have been estimated to have lived at one time in the great pueblos as many as 25,000 people.

ON THE BRINK OF THE SAHARA

PASS OF EL-KAUTARA, ALGERIA

It would be difficult to imagine a more dramatic entrance into the desert of the Sahara than through the narrow gorge in the Aures mountains where the village of El-Kautara stands. The whole character of the country and even of the weather changes at this point, the color of the mountains is blackish on the northern side but red as they face the Sahara, while the clouds seem to find it difficult to pass the boundary, and the traveler by train may be carried in a few minutes from dreary, damp country out into the blazing sun and dry soil of the desert. The gorge itself is narrow with towering cliffs on either side; there is only room for the river, the railway and the road—a road of some antiquity, be it said, for this was the site of an important Roman military station and the remains of a Roman bridge still exist.

On the southern side of the mountain, waving palms hide the village of El-Kautara. These are soon left behind and the real Sahara is entered. The sun-baked expanse is almost dazzling at first, and behind the Aures mountains, through which the train has just come, stretch out, a long red wall, shutting off what might be almost another hemisphere from this land of perpetual sunshine.

TWO DEFENDERS OF THE "STARRY FLAG"

A little story that speaks to the heart much as Mary Antin's longer story of immigrant experience spoke is in Scribners magazine, showing a woman refugee of Russia who comes to the United States with her little grandson at the invitation of a nephew who has prospered in the "land of the free." He sends with the letter of directions a postcard with the American flag, the flag of the white stars, as she learns to think of it. Her first view of New York is at night, when the fog lifts to give a glimpse of the glittering lights. She fancies it a corner of the flag of white stars. Her nephew helps her quickly through the Ellis island inquiry, but she thinks that she wins her way by virtue of the flag with white stars that she holds in her hand.

As time goes on it seems as if the flag with white stars is always helping her. She is afraid of the "soldiers" in the street and keeps her face turned away from them, lest they be vexed by her staring. But one day a policeman holds up two lines of traffic on the street to allow her to cross, picks up her big bundle and carries it to the curb for her. Then she understands that the "soldiers," like everybody else in the land of the white stars, are kind and she smiles at her helper "with the most exquisite confident amiability."

The time comes when the little grandson must go to school. She cannot believe that they will take him and teach him and even lend him books, and when she at last ventures to the building she cannot believe that such a splendid palace is really a school for her boy. She stands gazing from across the street. Suddenly she sees the flag with the white stars afloat above, and then she knows that it surely is his school, another gift of the stars. The lad goes to school and grows strong and happy and free. Meantime she is sewing at her daily stent of high piled garments, happy in her labor that is winning a livelihood for the boy, and in all these wonderful things besides, under the shelter of the flag. She buys a new flag whenever she can afford it, and her little room with its whirring machine is hung all round with the starry flag. She even sets a little one on the top of her machine that she may have it always in her sight. And when in the street she encounters occasionally a parade with the flag borne at the head, she stops to see it pass, respectfully bowing her head.

One day she stands at the edge of a meeting on a public square where after some preliminary talk some one begins to denounce the starry flag, to say cruel things about the white stars that have meant home and peace and safety to her and promise of a free and useful life to her boy. At last the speaker tears the flag down and tramples upon it. She cannot believe her eyes, but the next moment she scrambles through the crowd, intent to lift the flag. She cannot pierce the close throng, who are cheering the vandalism. But presently she sees that a young man has climbed the platform, thrust aside the vociferating orator and tied the flag again in place. Then the crowd cheers—cheers the flag it has just heard denounced. She stays to guard it as the crowd disperses, until she sees that some of the blue coated soldiers of the street crossings are there. She knows it is safe with them.

She does not know till late that night that the man who climbed up to raise the flag was her grandson. She has longed to serve somehow the starry flag, in return for what it has done for her. The debt has been paid in part, and she is glad.

To Be Awake

Moral reform and improvement are the effort to throw off sleep. Why is it that men give so poor an account of their day if they have not been slumbering? If they had not been overcome with drowsiness they would have performed something. The millions are awake enough for physical labor; but only one in a million is awake enough for effective intellectual exertion, only one in a hundred million to a poetic or divine life. To be awake is to be alive. I have never yet met a man who was quite awake. How could I have looked him in the face?—Thoreau.

Business Logic

Cheap prices generally mean cheap materials and cheap wages behind them. Good prices generally mean good materials and good wages behind them. An article sold at less than cost is most always in the seeming; rarely in the reality. The world of business would soon crumble if it sold its goods at less than cost even occasionally.—Ladies Home Journal.

True Happiness

A man's true happiness consists only in wisdom and in the knowledge of the truth, not at all in the fact that he is wiser than others or that others lack such knowledge.—Spinoza.

Be Blithe in Heart

To God be humble and to thy friend be kind,
And with thy neighbor gladly lend and borrow;
His chance tonight, it may be thine tomorrow;
Be blithe in heart for any adventure;
Full oft with wise men, 't has been said aftorrow
Without gladness availis no-treasure.

—William Dunbar.

Circus Public Steps Ahead of Cruelty

Careful censorship of motion picture plays excludes exhibitions of animals that might imply cruelty. The historic scenes permitted in "Quo Vadis" have perhaps their justification in that they are historical and bring home the advantage of living in a free and enlightened community. Yet even these are carefully guarded. Some one commenting on what we modernly call the circus in comparison with what was the circus in Nero's day has lately remarked that here again is seen modern progress, and progress even since the days of the "greatest show on earth." The animals that used to be turned loose in the amphitheater at Rome were kept safely in cages though often stirred up to fretted protest in Barnum's time; today they are tamed by kindness. No longer does the circus man who pretends to shoot somebody out of a cannon's mouth win the greatest applause. Acrobats are now trained experts in their line rather than reckless exploiters of their own bravado. The very children understand that the lion with his serene repose and his nicely barbered mane is, as Lloyd Jones has lately said in the Playbook, "a collie lion," content in captivity, not raging for freedom. Are not even the somersaulting motor car and the loop-the-loop bicycle going out of fashion? What the circus-going public seems to want today is the maximum of skill and the minimum of risk. Formerly the risk was sedulously made to appear even greater than it actually was. These things indicate a long step ahead from the circus maximus to Barnum, and also in the brief interval since Barnum another long step that has well-nigh abolished even the hint of cruelty or fear.

Pottery a Primary Art

The art of the potter has been the predominant one in all the early ages, and from its universal distribution as a useful and ornamental art it may be considered as a primary and foremost art of the world, both ancient and modern. The potter's art led to designing, coloring and illustrating. It was the forerunner of sculpture, decorative architecture and of the art of painting. The sculptor's and painter's art appeals more to the interest and art taste of mankind, yet the more generally applied art of the potter and glass maker has reached more universally through the domestic and art life of the world. —Minneapolis Journal (address by T. B. Walker).

Schubert Puzzling, Yet Understandable

Schubert is at once the most understandable and the most mysterious of tone-poets, asserts Philip Goepp in his book on the symphonies. He goes on: It is not eccentric to begin thus with a paradox, for he himself was a living paradox and the puzzle has never been solved. His music always speaks direct to the feelings. . . . Schubert is, without any doubt, far the most popular of the great masters, and in this position, it seems, he will probably never be displaced. We do not knit our brows in listening to him; we do not wonder at his meaning. We sit content in quiet ecstasy, like children listening to entrancing fairy stories.

But when we consider the poet himself, the machinery of the creation, so to speak, there seems to be no clew whatever. With all other composers it is possible analytically to discover so-called causes, inheritances, traditions, influences, from far and near, personal and national, broad and narrow. With Schubert we stand absolutely baffled. Since the earliest years of his career he has been the great mystery. To his daily companions, with all the free abandon of his good fellowship, he was still "der einzige," the only one, the unexplained. The mystery was increased by the lack of correspondence between his person and his genius. Schubert's presence is reported as insignificant. He had none of the heroic qualities of Beethoven, the delight in making an awful impression. But in any man the quality of pouring forth exquisite melody at such an extraordinary rate would be marvelous. . . . Schubert in his moments mounted higher than any. He was the Shelley and Keats combined of music; but they were usually mere moments, not continuous thought, on a high plane, save in these two wonderful symphonies.

Meeting the American People

That he has spoken to many audiences in all parts of the United States, but that he never really met the American people till he had spoken before a Chautauqua audience, is the declaration of a correspondent of the New York Times. He says:

"The wholesomeness, the alertness, the public spirit and patriotism of the American people are splendidly revealed by these typical audiences. The man who talks to them finds his heart stirred within him. Such audiences are a unique privilege for a speaker. They give him the feeling that he is really getting next to the people who make up the real America."

Grotesque Rocks

Monument park near Colorado Springs, Col., contains some queer sights. Among the most singular is a group of light grayish-yellow sandstone pillars 20 or more feet high capped with a thin layer of dark-colored rock resembling the tops of giant mushrooms which have partly dried up. The dark colored capping being of a much harder (ironstone) rock than the pillars, has to some extent protected the latter from disintegration. Especially at nightfall is the traveler impressed with the weird effect of these gigantic and grotesque forms, which in the uncertain light assume fantastic attitudes.—Argonaut.

Walking Stick Seat

An amusing patented article called a walking stick seat is described thus in Popular Mechanics: The walking stick is made in two parts, which, when separated, form two supports for a seat. The parts of the stick are made of aluminum, covered with vulcanized fiber, and the seat portion is an aluminum casting. The stick is telescopic, and may be extended to serve as a fishing rod as well as for seat supports.

ADVANTAGE OF A MADE-OVER HOUSE

To remodel an old house is often a wiser and more satisfactory thing to do than to tear down and begin new. The foundation, the beams, and even much of the interior woodwork of old houses, is so substantial that even after long use the houses can be made over to suit modern needs, and still serve for years to come. Suburban Life gives an account of such a remodeling. The old fashioned sloping roof was continued from above the former half story to the lower level of a porch, which was then built in with walls that were almost all windows, the glass door at one end. A dormer was then thrown out of both sides of the slanting roof. This gave excellent rooms on the second floor. A sun parlor or glassed-in porch was built at the side. The floor beams of the old house were of axe-hewn solid oak. The two great chimneys still stood firm, the foundation being of rock, three feet thick, and the old brick fireplaces were in good repair. The clapboards were of the wide, thick colonial make. The narrow hall with its staircase was obliterated, and an open staircase replaced the steep flight on one side of the living room. The dining room was little changed. A modern pantry was made in the narrow passage between dining room and kitchen with a window cut in the blank rear wall.

There were other changes, but these show the advantage of retaining the valuable parts of such an old house. The advantage indeed is double. The cost of a house thus remodeled is said to be actually less than an entirely new one, and moreover the result is a dwelling without a conventional likeness to modern houses.

World Commerce and Finance

LA HAUTE POLITIQUE and la haute finance have found a rival and a serious one, and that is in la haute commerce. For centuries the diplomatist ruled the political roost unchecked. Great financiers and great traders might come and go, exerting their influence for a moment, but the diplomatist remained on, utterly indifferent to their temporary claims. Those were the days of that French aristocracy which captivated even Burke, when the squires of the October Club sat silent and voted straight. Then came the change which substituted the "citizen" for the "aristocrat," and the mill owner for the squire, and the financier made himself dominant where the diplomatist had once held sway undisputed.

For a brief time, when his reign is compared with that of the diplomatist, the financier had it his own way. Statesmen had caused political crises and plunged nations into wars over that mysterious factor, the "balance of power." The financier made wars when it suited him and stopped wars when it suited him, in just the same way. If it was the power of finance that almost brought about a war over Morocco, in the struggle for new markets, it was the power of finance which, by a sudden withdrawal from the banks, made fighting impossible. The "armor" barons proved their power over many a flotation quite as thoroughly as the armored barons made theirs felt at Runnymede.

Just, however, as the men who paid the military piper claimed to call the tune, so the men who make the financial pipers are again claiming to call the tune. Every day the purely manufacturing interests are beginning to recognize their power, and are proving not unwilling to translate this power into deeds. An autocratic European government which not long ago produced a tariff bill that was objectionable to certain interests, found itself faced with a manufacturing ultimatum, which proved just as efficacious as the withdrawal of the bank balances at the moment of the Morocco crisis. Success is always infectious, and the success of the armor baron is threatening to produce a machine baron or a cotton baron.

Another America Cup Race

BRITISH and American lovers of sport will be glad that signs appear on the horizon favorable to yacht races next summer in American waters in which vessels designed and built for members of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club and the New York Yacht Club will compete. Controversy, long continued and over details that in the final compromise have not proved important, has at last come to an end, and challenger and defenders can now proceed with selection of designers and builders and get ready for another struggle for title to the America cup, a trophy honored both by its age and its importance in the history of international sport.

The future of yachting as a form of recreation and contest is by no means as clear as it was when the America cup was first put up for competition. Rival sports now exist and have a wider and more successfully organized international range of activity. New forms of mechanical power have come enabling marine architects and builders to make craft that join with speed attributes of comfort and reliability not always found in the wind-driven boat.

Consequently it is doubtful whether a public exists today which can be counted upon to show any such absorbing interest in this forthcoming contest as was shown during the first of the tests of British and American yachtsmen's seamanship. But even so, a constituency that is as loyal as ever to the fine art of navigation without enginery, will not be small. Boys, youth and men still abound to whom the consummate pleasure of recreational endeavor is mastering rudder and sails in the fight of a boat with wind and tide. Such persons are found wherever water flows and blasts launch forth and zephyrs woo. All such devotees can be counted upon to watch henceforth every step in the process culminating in the races of 1914.

Our comment upon the controversy now fortunately closed would be that deeds of trust governing international or other sporting contests, like other historic documents, may suffer from too literal interpretation. Donors' intentions should be respected in the main, no doubt, but there is a fidelity to the past which can shade into servility. Far wiser are those givers who provide for wise, recurring selection of administrators of a trust and executors of a policy, and then leave to the discretionary power of these later officials settlement of those details of interpretation and method of administration which new conditions seem to make prudent.

House Builders from the Schools

WE READ in the Monitor that a woman instructor in the State Normal College at Normal, Ill., possessed of $2500, recently sat down, drew plans, and set about the construction of a home. We read further that she has succeeded in designing and in building, mainly with her own hands, just the kind of a home she wanted for the housing of her mother, her sister and herself, and that it is in every respect a complete and creditable piece of work. Then we turn to another part of the Monitor and learn that boys in the Ishpeming, Mich., high school, who conduct a cooperative school farm for profit and repair the school buildings for pay, recently erected, on purely practical lines, a gymnasium to be attached to the high school. The boys, it is added, did this work, and do much more in the construction line, under the direction of a representative of the United States bureau of education.

These incidents, though full of interest in themselves, are neither isolated nor peculiar. It is impossible in these days to pick up a publication giving even casual attention to women's or children's work without finding some achievement recorded that marks plainly a departure from old divisional lines in the mechanical arts and handicrafts. Everywhere women are using the tools of artisans. They are doing carpentry work, they are doing cabinet work, they are working in leather, in copper, in brass and in steel. They are in all the handicrafts. They are prominent in the domain of decorative art. They are jewelers, bookbinders, goldsmiths and silversmiths. Some of the best designers in America today are women. They are architects and builders. Why, then, should it be thought strange that one of them should plan and construct a home?

As to the boys, the manual and technical schools are demonstrating that there is no more excuse for drawing a division on age than on sex. Youths possessed of the requisite natural taste and faculty are being taught before reaching their teens, in many cases, what only adults were expected to know in the various departments of mechanics under the old system of training. The various school exhibitions of boys' work offer conclusive proof that there is no need of withholding knowledge of a practical character from juveniles until their school days are over. The Ishpeming achievement simply proves that what has been accomplished there may, in the same circumstances, be accomplished everywhere.

The most useful lesson to be drawn from the exceptional building enterprises which the Monitor records is that they need not be exceptional; that no door of opportunity need be considered closed because of sex or age conditions. It may not be desirable or advisable that women and children shall take up the building trades and monopolize them because of the possibilities revealed in the instances cited, but it is both advisable and desirable that the old stone walls of limitation be thrown down.

Wise Move Toward Flood Prevention

WITH a view to the avoidance of such conditions as led to the flooding of town and country over a wide area of Ohio, Indiana and other of the central states last spring, Congress enacted a law intended to give wide publicity to all projected bridge construction on waterways not properly within the jurisdiction of the federal government as navigable streams. Because of the destruction wrought by the Ohio floods it is necessary that there shall be a great amount of new bridge building done on the Muskingum and other rivers in that state. Some of the more urgent construction, indeed, has already been carried to completion. But further work is now stopped until the government shall have an opportunity, through its engineers, of inquiring into its character. It has been possible for federal authority to interfere by applying a provision of the enactment referred to, which requires local authorities to advertise their intentions with regard to bridge construction, in centers of navigation, for twenty-eight days previous to the beginning of such construction.

The object in view is made clear by the statement of the government engineer at Cincinnati to the effect that the number of piers for the Muskingum projects can be greatly reduced, that the piers necessary can be made higher than shown in the plans, and that abutments can be made shorter—all with the purpose of lessening obstruction to the passage of the water in the stream. The order of interruption will halt work on bridge construction at several points, and local opinion may for the time being be raised against what is seemingly outside interference, but in the long run the country and communities affected will profit by this wise precautionary action. It is now fully determined that one of the principal causes of the Ohio floods of last spring was intrusion upon and neglect of the river channels. If these had been kept open so as to allow the free and rapid passage of the waters, much, if not all, the suffering and loss due to the inundation might have been avoided. Clumsy construction of piers for railroad and other bridges is likely to form as great and as harmful an obstruction to the movement of the water as the invasion of industrial piers, the formation of sandbars and the encroachment of timber, underbrush and weed growth along the banks. The federal government should be applauded for the interest and zeal it is displaying in the present instance, and state and local authorities should rather help than hinder it in its efforts to keep the tributary streams open and clear.

The Mails in Produce Distribution

A REPORT from the postmaster-general to the effect that a steadily increasing use of the parcel post system in the forwarding of fruit, eggs and other farm products is noticeable will be received with something more than a sense of self-congratulation by those who were earnest and sanguine in their advocacy of the innovation as a means of lowering the cost of living. The parcel post system cannot be said to have passed as yet the initial stage of its development. There is much to be learned in the handling of it. There is much to be learned in the use of it. It will take considerable time to bring it to the highest point of efficiency and utility. But if at this early stage the increase in produce shipments has been such as to force itself upon the attention of the postmaster-general, that fact affords sufficien ground upon which to look confidently to the future usefulness of the service in the common affairs of the people.

There has never been any doubt regarding the helpfulness of the parcel post as a distributor of manufactured products and merchandise, and, therefore, the public is not surprised to learn that there are constant increases in the transportation of these classes of matter. Other countries had successfully experimented, and this country had had some limited experience along this line, in the transmission of foreign packages, before the general domestic parcel post system was adopted. But, whatever European experiences may have been in the handling of farm and garden produce in the mails, the extent of American territory, the volume and variety of American agricultural products, the special needs, the habits and customs, of the American people, were so different from those obtaining in the older countries that the trial of the parcel post as a foodstuff distributor, it was seen, must be made here on entirely new and independent lines. Great Britain, Germany, France, Austria or Italy, within their own dominions, might have succeeded in distributing cheaply and speedily by mail the fruits of the soil, but none of them had to meet the exigencies of, practically, a continental service, or the needs of people scattered, and often thinly scattered, over forty-eight states.

American experiments with the parcel post should be of immense value to Canada. At the beginning, the latter country will enjoy advantages denied the United States in the initial stages of the system's introduction. There is not the slightest reason why both countries within a few years should not have in the parcel post service, nationally and internationally, an agency for the distribution of foodstuffs equal to that in existence in any of the populous, highly cultivated and economically compact nations of Europe. The parcel post should be the means of equalizing the supply and steadying the markets of North America, so that "feast" and "famine" periods in various sections, like other unnecessary and unpleasant experiences, shall, at least, become infrequent in the future. It is not too much to hope that through perfected distribution they shall finally disappear alogether.

Labor Question in England

EVERY ONE who knows anything at all about labor conditions in England is aware that the absence of apparent unrest at the present moment is entirely superficial. The lull of the moment is, in short, the ominous calm before what is intended to be an industrial tornado. The reason why this lull is so much more apparent than real is that the labor battalions are engaged in the intricate maneuver of changing their front, an operation commonly supposed to be fatal if undertaken in the course of an engagement. In these circumstances, the more impetuous spirits have been restrained by counsels of caution. This argument, however, cannot be indefinitely employed. Sooner or later, the struggle will surge through the streets unless terms are arranged in the gate.

No one thing has, perhaps, done more to vivify the demands of the men than the report of the government commission on the cost of living. The amazing part of that report is probably the revelation that, after a long period of low prices, the cost of actual necessities has been reasserting itself, with the result that when the purchasing power of wages is analyzed, the standard of comfort enjoyed by the proletariat is found to be precisely where it was exactly a quarter of a century ago. On the other hand, the luxury of what it is usual to call "the classes" has distinctly increased, so that the skilled or unskilled laborer naturally asks himself how it is that no fairer share of the ever increasing national wealth comes his way.

The only escape from this, according to the labor papers and organizations, is a demand for better terms all round. In order, however, that such demands may be backed by overwhelming force, there has been going on during the last few months, that root and branch reorganization which, when completed, in the autumn, will cause labor to face capital with a new front. The main changes have been the elimination of the smaller unions, and their absorption in the greater unions. Instead, to give a single example, of the railway servants entering upon a struggle with a number of separate unions representing separate sections of the workers, the whole body will in future be represented by a single organization. It is believed that such a change will enable the unions to speak not only with far greater authority, but with far greater incisiveness. What the proletariat is beginning to realize is that a rise of wages is almost inevitably accompanied by a rise in prices, with the result that no real change takes place. What they are therefore aiming at is something far more fundamental, and it is here the claims of the syndicalist and the socialist, of the disciples of direct action and parliamentary action, become conflicting. What is perfectly evident is that a new struggle is being steadily prepared for, and that it can only be averted by the exhibition of a conciliatory spirit on both sides, and by a real determination to arrive at a better condition of affairs in the labor market.

Technical Education in Canada

IT IS CLEARLY indicated in the remarks of Dr. J. W. Robertson, chairman of the Dominion commission on technical education, before the Dominion Educational Association in Ottawa a few days ago, that in public instruction Canada finds itself at present in a situation similar to that from which the United States is slowly, but certainly, emerging. Precisely the conditions, with reference particularly to the training of boys, that were recognized and strongly protested against in this country five years or more ago, and for the reversal of which scores of prominent American educators continue to labor, are pointed out by Dr. Robertson as existing today in the Dominion. His reference to the tendency in the education of children to lead them away from, rather than toward "productive employment," and to such a degree that "for one boy who is looking for a position in the workshops there are 100 looking for office work," might have been just as truthfully and forcibly directed toward the United States public school system up to a very recent date. There is now a decidedly strong pull away from the ornamental and toward the practical in popular education on this side of the line, and we believe it needs only the leadership of educators like Dr. Robertson to bring about a speedy change for the better on the other side.

Those who strongly and persistently champion vocational training in the public schools are often criticized for placing the utilitarian above the cultural, but this is only because they are misunderstood. People have been compelled to meet and overcome this criticism in Germany, France and England, as well as in the United States. They will be compelled to meet and overcome it in Canada. When Dr. Robertson declares his intention of supporting with enthusiasm educative measures encouraging to all kinds of handicraft in the common schools of the Dominion, he at once invites opposition from a very large, respectable, and influential element which does not believe in commercializing or industrializing popular education, and says so emphatically. But he may rest assured that in Canada, as elsewhere, the cause of vocational education will ultimately have a fair hearing. When this time comes it will be found, we think, that every worthy friend of technical instruction would have it go hand in hand with cultural education, that the one great aim of the vocationalist is to send from the common schools into the world of activity young people of both sexes equipped in all respects for the duties and the struggles that lie before them. Briefly stated, they want to educate boys and girls to be useful as well as ornamental members of society.

It is not now accepted as good policy among advanced educators anywhere that boys or girls, young men or young women, should be turned out of the schools or colleges in ignorance of the manner in which they are to make a living. Quite the reverse of this is the prevalent opinion. It is held, that is, that the schools and colleges should devlop in their students, to the highest degree possible, whatever aptitude, talent or genius the young people may possess for the practical as well as for the theoretical and cultural. This position is really the bulwark of the vocational and technical movements in education.
